10,000 Planes for England. We Continue Our Peace Dream. What a Fleet Could Do. Oceans Are Obsolete.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Dec. 5.

ENGLAND, AT last, is fully awake to the importance of air fighting. When will this country wake up? After our first major bombardment, perhaps?

The British warn Germany against repeating the mistake made when Germany started building surface ships in competition with England. The kaiser and his great admiral decided to upset that "Britannia Rules the Waves" song. And soon there was no kaiser, and the German "grand fleet" was lying on the bottom, at Scapa Flow.

NOW ENGLAND warns Germany:

"Don't try to do in the air, against us, what you tried to do on the water, with your feeble kaiser and your able von Tirpitz."

AND ENGLAND means it, and acts as the thorough British do, when they MEAN anything.

France has an air fleet of more than four thousand ships. England demands a fighting air fleet of TEN THOUSAND planes of all classes, from the swiftest pursuit planes to the heaviest bombing planes and air transport ships, to carry soldiers.

And furthermore, the British government suggests, urgently, that important British cities supply their own air defense, the swift combat fliers to drive off any invasion bringing bombs and poison gas.

YEARS AGO, in this column, it was suggested to states facing Asia, on this coast, California, Oregon and Washington, that they provide their own air militia, on a big scale.

If airships come across the Pacific through the morning mist, some day, many things would happen before Washington could decide that air war is real, and build the necessary ships.

ONE OF the things bound to happen would be destruction of every city on the coast and far inland, with millions of citizens dead by poison gas.

Their work done, the ships from Asia, or from Europe, if it happens on the east coast, would simply fly across our northern or southern border, to be comfortably interned, in Canada or Mexico, until the end of the war, and perhaps without loss of an airship or a man.

THE PRESIDENT will not be indifferent to this British attitude, and when time permits, he will, it is to be hoped, use his influence with the nation to put through Congress legislation that will make THIS country first in the air.

Only twenty-two or three years ago, Lord Northcliffe offered ten thousand pounds to anyone that would fly the narrow English channel, and the idea that it could be done seemed so preposterous that Lloyds, for a trifle, insured Northcliffe against having to pay the money.

When a Frenchman, Bleriot, made the flight, Lloyds paid the 10,000 pounds, and England, aghast, realized that her great defense, the channel waters, no longer amounted to anything, and her surface battleships were obsolete.

ONLY A few years ago, W. R. Hearst, through his newspapers, offered a prize of $25,000 for a flight across this continent.

Now trans-continental airships fly on schedule time, and Mr. Hearst is building a trans-continental plane for his own use, flies from this ranch to his Los Angeles office and back here for dinner, 520-mile round trip.

Yesterday Mr. Hearst was discussing here with young Mr. Cord, of the Stinson Airplane Company, a couple of new ships to replace smaller planes that he now uses for coastwise flights.

Aviation moves rapidly; you cannot keep up with it, by talk. Try to protect yourself and your family from future unpleasant experience by urging your Congressman, if you know who he is, and your two Senators, if you know their names, to give this country such defense as will be a warning to the whole world.

BRITAIN IS convinced, by numerous tests, that it is impossible to protect a great city from sudden air attack.

But Britain knows, and we ought to know, that while you may not be able to prevent attack, you can be so well prepared that no nation would dare attack you.

The United States should be able to say to all nations:

"We are a peaceful nation, never started a war in all our history, except for our freedom from England.

"But, please do us a favor. Come and see what we have. We shall show you submarines that would sink every ship of yours and your allies, within a month, planes, bombs and poison gas that would wreck all your cities, and kill your populations, within ten days.

"And all we ask is to be left in peace, to attend to our own business, within our own borders."

SUCH AN announcement, backed up by aircraft factories, gas and bomb factories, turning out supplies NOW would interest all our foreign friends, and keep them from making a foolish mistake.

Nobody ever slapped the face of John L. Sullivan. It was generally known that such a slap would be unsafe.

CASH CRISIS HALTS WORK OF BUDGET

Council Studies Plan To Raise Money For Expenses

City Council turned aside from budget sessions today to seek means of raising $1,200,000 to cover current expenses and payrolls.

Repealers were introduced at a special meeting of Council this afternoon on ordinances for the improvement of Nineteenth street and five sewer projects, representing a total charge against the city's borrowing power of $235,700.

If these are passed at another special Council session tomorrow, they will allow the city to put through a loan of $1,200,000 for current expenses and leave $80,000 in borrowing power at the first of the year.

Council had proposed to repeal $1,122,610 in street widening and paving ordinances in order to bolster councilmanic borrowing power, hard hit by an estimated $100,000,000 reduction in assessments.

City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt told Council it could not repeal a street opening except by vacating the street. The ordinances for the actual physical work on the miprovements can be repealed.

There is more than $8,000,000 left in the people's borrowing power, so that the $1,400,000 bond issue for work relief, including the Civil Works program, passed yesterday, will go through in about six weeks.

In the meantime about $120,000 in cash from a previous bond issue is left to carry on civil works, according to Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works. Efforts are being made to borrow picks and shovels from railroads and industries. Lang said:

TAX CUT HOPE DIM

As Council began trimming the budget today, little hope appeared for a tax reduction in 1934.

One of the first items to be stricken out was a $5,000 fund for printing a list of city real estate assessments.

Up to noon, a total of $14,590 was slashed from the Mayor's budget recommendations. These cuts were chiefly in provisions for supplies and miscellaneous services in the office of City Clerk, Traffic Court, the Controller's office and Treasurer's office.

CLASH OVER CUT

Considerable controversy arose over elimination of the fund for printing the real estate assessment list. It was removed by a vote of 4 to 3, Councilmen Charles Anderson, P. J. McArdle and Robert Garland voting "no."

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, chairman of the League of Women Voters, and representative of Mayor-elect William N. McNair; Mrs. J. O. Miller and M. C. Conick, auditor for Main & Co., were present.

The budget sent to Council yesterday by Mayor John S. Herron was for $21,445,128, which is $273,523 more than last year's adjusted appropriation.

No Yule Pay Seen For Mayview Force

The Christmas outlook for 385 employes at Mayview was drear today as no prospects appeared of finding $30,800 to meet the December 1, 15 and January 1 payrolls.

Dr. James S. Hammers, medical director, led the list of employes. His salary for the two weeks from November 15 to December 1 was $218.75. The only employes to receive their pay were mechanics and miners in the institution's coal mine.

SWEATSHOPS FOUGHT BY PINCHOT

Miss Perkins Upholds Governor in Plea To Legislature

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Gov. Pinchot this afternoon will address a joint session of the Legislature, demand passage of the social legislation program he has prosposed, and dare the House and Senate to adjourn without passage of state laws to make effective the regulations of the NRA.

Embodied in the Governor's message will be a telegram he has received from Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor in the Roosevelt Cabinet, declaring that the passage of industrial legislation by the states is imperative, and explaining:

"We must rely upon state laws to prevent a possible return to sweatshop conditions."

The Governor will review the subjects outlined in his call for the special session, few of which have been given anything approaching final approval by the Legislature. He will insist upon passage of a graded income tax law to provide revenue for embarrassed school districts, and will urge the passage of election reform bills including a permanent registration bill for Pittsburgh.

KANE HOUSING BILLS

He is also expected to demand passage of a series of bills to create limited dividend housing corporations, introduced by Representative John J. Kane, of Pittsburgh. These bills in past sessions have been approved by

LINDYS TO HOP OCEAN TONIGHT

BATHURST, Gambia, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Spending the entire day indoors resting, Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh planned to takeoff at midnight today (7 p. m. Pittsburgh time) on their proposed 1,900 mile flight to South America.

Col. Lindbergh chose that time for his departure because at that hour the winds are most favorable for a getaway.

A freshening breeze sprang up during the morning, giving promise that the flight, which has been delayed by a calm since Thursday, might proceed.

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—William Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury, wearing a broad smile and apparently with undimmed vigor, arrived here yesterday "to rest and recover my health."

Suffering from a throat ailment, he said he expected to settle down here for a long rest.

Senator Lewis Mysteriously Disappears

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, has mysteriously disappeared, it was learned today.

His secretary, Edward L. Millen, this afternoon started a nationwide search for the senior Senator from this state.

Lewis was scheduled to speak in behalf of the NRA at Springfield, Mo., last night, but did not show up. He was scheduled to arrive in Dallas, Tex., at noon today, but failed to put in an appearance. No word was received from him.

Calvert Guardians To Be Continued

Petition of Attorney George H. Calvert to discharge guardians named to manage his affairs was refused in a decision handed down by Judge Frank P. Patterson today.

Calvert's affairs were placed in the hands of the Potter Title and Trust Company, Mrs. Virginia A. Calvert, his wife, and Joseph A. Trefallen in 1931. At the time disbarment proceedings had been started against him for the alleged mishandling of the estate of Mrs. Eleanor Davidson. His former law partner, Henry G. Wasson, was disbarred.

ROY A. MacGREGOR . . . . HE'LL LOCATE 20 STATE STORES

BANK CODE HITS SMALL SUMS

Thousands of small depositors of Pittsburgh banks will be affected by a code of fair practices expected to become effective January 1.

Under the code awaiting signature in Washington a service charge of $1 per month for all checking accounts of less than $200, the amount to be figured on a basis of daily balances, is to be established. The accounts are to be permitted a total of 15 "entries" monthly, either deposits or withdrawals, those in excess to command a service charge of five cents each.

Accounts ranging from $200 to $1,000 are to be serviced on a metered basis. On accounts between $200 and $400 there would be no minimum service charge but a service charge of five cents for items entered in excess of 15. Between $400 and $600 and from there to $1,000 the number of free entries increase and accounts of $1,000 or more no item charge will be made.

Woman's First Shot Pierces Deer's Heart

Mrs. Margaret Gething, 18, of 233 Sixth avenue, New Kensington, arrived home yesterday from Clearfield County, with a 150-pound deer which she shot while hunting with her husband, Harold Gething.

The husband first sighted the animal and shot it through the ear. Then Mrs. Gething, sitting on a stump for a rest, took quick aim and dropped it with a bullet through the heart. It was her first hunting experience.

Mrs. Hearst to Be White House Guest

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(Universal.)—Mrs. William Randolph Hearst was to arrive at the White House today to be the overnight guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

FRILLS BANNED IN RUM STORES

The state liquor stores will not be "gilded halls," but rather plain storerooms, where a man can walk in, buy a bottle of whisky without being blinded by an expensive color scheme and walk out.

This prediction was made today by a gentleman who should know—Roy A. MacGregor, who yesterday was named an investigator for the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board.

MacGregor will select the sites for the 20 stores in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, which will be opened January 1.

He said today that 10 of the stores will be in Pittsburgh, three or four of them downtown. The stores will consist each of one floor and a basement and, he warned, top rent will be $300.

MacGregor, who lives in Crafton and is a close friend of Senator Frank J. Harris, isn't exactly a prohibitionist. When he was asked how he stood, he challenged:

"Try me!"

Guard Mayor's Child At His Inauguration

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Although expressing themselves as skeptical that any immediate danger threatened her, police surrounded 9-year-old Ann Harrison Beach with every protective safeguard possible today at the inaugural of her father as mayor of Hartford, as a result of a reported plot to kidnap her.

Dr. Work to Wed Merchant's Widow

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Word reached Washington today that Dr. Hubert Work, former Secretary of the Interior, will be married at noon next Friday, in Denver, to Mrs. Ethel Reed Gano, widow of a Denver merchant.

Dr. Work's first wife died several years ago, in Washington.

PENNSYLVANIA AND OHIO RATIFY REPEAL, UTAH VOTE DOOMS DRY LAW

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Tried almost 14 years and adjudged wanting, constitutional prohibition ends tonight and the American people face curiously a new period of experimentation on how to handle liquor.

Pennsylvania became the thirty-fourth state to ratify repeal in early afternoon, when through a special telegraphic loop to the State Department, Acting Secretary Phillips received word of the convention action from R. J. Beamish, Secretary of State of Pennsylvania. Mr. Beamish also informed Phillips that he was sending copies to Washington immediately by airplane, motorcycle and mail.

The Ohio repeal convention got under way at 1:11 p. m. and ratification by the thirty-fifth state was recorded after a comparatively brief session.

With Pennsylvania and Ohio safely in the repeal fold, only formal ratification by Utah remained necessary to do away with the Eighteenth Amendment. The Salt Lake City vote will be cast about 7:30 p. m. (Mountain time) or 9:30 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

Automatically the Twenty-first Amendment takes effect, terminating federal prohibition policing save to protect dry states from liquor importations, and leaving the states to deal as they see fit with strong drink and attendant difficulties.

This reverse in national policy was dictated by a majority approaching 10,000,000 of more than 20,000,000 votes cast since Congress submitted the question last February. Thirty-nine states housing 88 per cent of the population have voted.

Only two stood by the amendment about which such dispute has swirled in latter years, despite the high hopes held when all the states except Rhode Island, New Jersey and Connecticut ratified it in infancy. The two were the Carolinas.

But that today was history, something for the chroniclers

Pa. Convention 34th to Ratify Dry Law Repeal

By WILLIAM J. KELLY
International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Prohibition, the nation's noble experiment dying after 14 years, was carried a step nearer the "cemetery" by Pennsylvania's formal ratification of the Twenty-first Amendment to the United States constitution today.

The unanimous vote of 15 delegates attending the first constitutional convention in this commonwealth in 144 years made Pennsylvania the thirty-fourth state to ballot officially for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

VOTE SPEEDED

Moving with rapidity, the "wet" delegates, elected by more than a 3-to-1 vote, carried out the mandate expressed by voters at the November election. Only the verdicts of Ohio, voting this afternoon, and Utah, balloting this evening, are needed to seal the casket bearing the "noble experiment" that failed to the graveyard.

The official vote was announced at 12:51 p. m.

Shortly before the convention started, dry forces moved again to invalid Pennsylvania's repeal vote by filing an appeal from a Dauphin County Court decision with the state Supreme Court prothonotary here.

The appeal, filed by W. K. Alsop, Philadelphia, was taken on the court's refusal to grant an injunction which would have prevented state officials from placing the question on ballots at the November election. The petition named Dr. G. W. Hartman and Harry S. Lutz, both of Harrisburg, and Gerald Disney, Philadelphia, plaintiffs.

Silence hung over the crowded chamber as the roll was taken. This same quiet prevailed as the roll call was certified. It then was handed to Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Beamish wired William Phillips, Acting Secretary of State at Washington, the convention verdict immediately.

Beamish wired Phillips:

"You are hereby officially notified that on December 5,

U. S. Grants State $4,000,000 for Relief

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Allotments totaling $5,250,000 were made today by the Federal Relief Administration to five states. Pennsylvania's share was $4,000,000.

Pittsburghers Wait 9:30 P. M. For Legal Rum

They voluntarily went on a thirst diet yesterday to be in trim for repeal tonight.

Utah, which seems to lean that way in most things, wants to be the last state to get in line for repeal.

So the boys in the back room won't be able to walk into the front room until at least 9 o'clock tonight in Pittsburgh—if not later.

The delay of several hours will at least allow the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board to grant a few more licenses.

RUSH FOR LICENSES

In Harrisburg today the rush for licenses included a generous number of Pittsburghers, anxious to be able to dispense the hard stuff as soon as the bell rings.

Early today not more than 100 of the approximate 500 licenses already granted by the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board had gone to Pittsburghers. However, the board was shooting through the applications today, and this number will be greatly increased before the Utah Legislature acts.

Regardless of how many licensed places are operating tonight in Pittsburgh, the drug stores and speakeasies will still be doing business.

The bigger "speaks" are expected to meet the prices offered

Huey Long's Foes Arm To Block Election

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Senator Huey P. Long's political forces were put to rout by violently demonstrating citizens in three of the 12 parishes of the Sixth Congressional District today.

They were forced to cancel the Congressional election in those three parishes when the residents made a display of armed resistance to the proposed balloting.

Elsewhere in the district, the election was ordered to proceed, but balloting was very light as both state highway police and armed citizens stood near the polling booths, tallying those who to vote.

The election was designed to send Mrs. Bolivar E. Kemp, Senator Long's candidate, to the vacant Sixth District Congress seat in a suddenly called election, without the holding of a party primary.

The parishes of Tangipahoa, home of Mrs. Kemp, Livingston and St. Helena in the eastern sector of the district, after a week of protesting demonstrations in which the Kemp ballots were seized and publicly burned, turned out heavily armed today to prevent the balloting.

M'NAIR COOL TO CABINET PICKED BY BUSINESS GROUP

LIST INCLUDES BUT SINGLE DEMOCRAT

Next Mayor Stops in Harrisburg to Talk With Party Heads

By HOWARD L. BROWNING
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—William N. McNair, Democratic Mayor-elect of Pittsburgh, today released cabinet recommendations made to him by a Pittsburgh organization identified as having "considerable weight and prestige."

The list contains the names of a number of prominent Pittsburghers not often connected with officeholding, although the affiliations of several with the Citizens' League seemed to point to that group as the possible source of the nominations.

ONLY ONE DEMOCRAT

It is pretty definite that the Mayor-elect isn't taking too seriously the cabinet recommendations. Since they are all Republicans with the exception of John J. Kennedy, defeated Democratic candidate for Common Pleas Court, and since McNair is first and last a party man, it's a safe guess that good Democratic job hunters needn't be discouraged.

The list follows:

Superintendent of Police, Benjamin Marshall.

Assessors, Thomas C. McMahon and 10 appraisers, each of whom should be familiar with the section of the city under his jurisdiction.

City Solicitor, C. D. Scully, W. Clyde Grubbs or Earl F. Reed and three assistants, Thomas M. Benner, A. Leo Weil, Jr., and Ella Graubert.

Director of Welfare, William P. Witherow, Stanley Ashe, Frank D. Preston, W. I. Lacy, of Cleveland, O., or Helen Glenn Tyson.

Director of Supplies, William T. Todd, Jr., of Somers, Filter and Todd; Harry Willock, F. Verne Dias, I. E. Walton or Frank S. Stafford.

Eight young attorneys with not less than five years' law practice for Police Magistrates.

McNair admittedly has braced himself for a storm of protest against the nominations. But the protest is needless, for the Mayor-elect won't name many on the proposed list, with the probable exceptions of Attorney Cornelius D. Scully and Kennedy.

SCULLY'S CHANCE GOOD

Scully, a Republican, according to McNair, was chairman of McNair's campaign committee and is considered the probable next city solicitor.

There is a bare chance that McNair, who has been casting around in vain for a satisfactory director of public safety, may ask Scully to take over that job, instead of the solicitorship.

McNair will be satisfied with a mediocre city solicitor since he is an attorney himself, but he wants a strong safety director and has every confidence in Scully.

For director of public safety the recommenders would have E. O. Tabor, who lost in the primaries as a candidate for the Republican councilmanic nomination. Otherwise, Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington is suggested.

Pennington is out, however, because of the charter stipulation that cabinet officers must be resident in Pittsburgh for one year before appointment.

CONFERS WITH LEADERS

The actual appointments McNair will make will differ widely from this, the first list he has as yet considered.

McNair was in Harrisburg today, tending to a last fragment of his law business and getting back into the swing of pre-inauguration politics.

His arrival here early today ended a two-week vacation tour he had taken to Miami, Fla., and was the signal for the start of immediate conferences with party leaders here for the special session of the Legislature.

McNair held a short meeting with County Chairman David L. Lawrence and with Edward Jones, his campaign manager, by way of renewing contact with what has gone on in Pittsburgh during the last two weeks.

WILL BOOST PROGRAM

While he is here McNair will undoubtedly do some plugging for the Powers' graded tax bills which proposes a taxation ratio of five mills on land to one on improvements in both city and county.

He will probably look into the utilitites situation, check on city budget figures and talk cabinet appointments with other party lights.

Meanwhile he plans to rejoin Mrs. McNair, George E. Evans and Mrs. William C. Ridge, Evans' daughter, with whom he drove south, in Gettysburg, Pa., tonight or tomorrow morning. McNair left them in Richmond, Va., last night to come to Harrisburg by train.

COUGHLIN GETS PRAISE OF RYAN

International News Service.

DETROIT, Dec. 5.—Declaring Pope Pius XI is more "radical" than the NRA, in his attitude toward industrialism, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, today had indorsed the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin as a "very useful citizen."

The noted priest, who came to Detroit to address the Catholic conference on industrial problems, declared he considers the new deal "truly revolutionary," adding:

"But it does not go as far as would the occupational group organization recommended by the Pope in his late encyclical 'Quadrigesimo Anno.'

"Father Coughlin is on the side of the angels in the issue between those who oppose social justice and those who struggle for it. I do not agree with everything he says, but am with him on the main question that confronts us now, the effort to get the nation out of the depression. Father Coughlin is a very useful citizen. Let him make all the mistakes he likes, he is at least stirring up the popular mind, and somebody has to do that."

M'NAIR TO TALK IN GREENSBURG

Special to the Sun-Telegraph

GREENSBURG, Dec. 5.—William N. McNair, Pittsburgh's mayor-elect, will top the list of speakers tonight at Westmoreland County's mammoth Democratic victory rally.

This was announced today after Wilfred S. McKeon, general chairman of the rally, found McNair in the Penn-Harris hotel, Harrisburg, and invited him over the telephone to attend the rally.

McNair will leave Harrisburg by train at 4:14 and is due in Greensburg at 9:45. He will be met by a special committee from the rally which will start at 7 p. m.

The rally, to celebrate the election of 10 mayors and burgesses in Westmoreland county, is under the auspices of the Democratic County Committee of which United States Marshall J. Hilary Keenan is chairman. Other speakers will include United States Attorney H. S. Dumbald and Mayor-elect James Gold, of Monessen.

2-CENT POSTAL RATE SEEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Two-cent postage is in the offing.

Paving the way for early action by Congress toward reducing postage rates, a meeting of the House Postoffice Committee has been called to formulate a new schedule of rates for regular postage and air mail. At the same time the committee will make recommendations for action on the Kelly airmail bill which provides for budgeting airmail expenses from the revenues.

Representative Clyde Kelly (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, ranking Republican member of the committee, said:

"It is safe to say that the committee will recommend restoring the class domestic postage rate to 2 cents and will reduce airmail postage from 8 cents to 5 cents an ounce. Favorable action by Congress is to be anticipated and without delay. Even under the present rates the volume of postal matter is increasing to an extent that is a certain index to better business."

Ballot Check Slated In Mine Vote War

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A check on disputed ballots in the recent National Labor Board election at the H. C. Frick Coke Company's Edenborn (Pa.) mine was on the board's docket for today.

Claims that ballots were cast by persons ineligible to vote will be checked by the board and its election supervisors. The official result at Edenborn has been withheld pending the outcome of the check.

Hunter's Stumble Causes Fatal Shot

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A final just-before-dusk effort to get a deer after an unsuccessful day of hunting brought death to Kermit Dancer, 25, a miner, of near Greensburg.

Gunning with John Kmetz, 16, and two others, Dancer stumbled against Kmetz and the latter's shotgun accidentally discharged, the charge striking the miner in the head.

HULL PUTS BAN ON DEBT TALK

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 5—(AP.)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today said that although international bankers have been antagonized to President Roosevelt's program, the United States feels the discussion of private debts is outside the scope of the Pan-American conference.

Hull's statement was part of an acrimonious debate in the steering committee of the conference.

Hull agreed the United States delegation would serve on the subcommittee, but reiterated it would not discuss the question of private debts.

The sub-committee will report December 8.

PLAN DRASTIC INCOME TAX LAW CHANGE

House Report Goes Far Beyond Proposal To Close Gaps

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Revision of the income tax laws, going far beyond the original proposal to close gaps disclosed in the Senate Banking Committee investigation, was before the House Ways and Means Committee today on recommendation of its investigating sub-committee.

More than $270,000,000 would be taken from income taxpayers each year under the proposals of the sub-committee, with some suggestions in disagreement which might add another $50,000,000.

Without waiting for the treasury experts, who are studying the tax laws, the Ways and Means Committee received informally the report of its investigating subcommittee yesterday and was given a complete report today.

JOINT SESSION MONDAY

With a joint session on liquor taxes planned on December 11 by the Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees, the House committee will consider income tax law revisions this week.

The sweeping proposals of the investigating sub-committee are designed specifically to hit the wealthy, although some proposals would add to the tax burden of the greater part of the income tax paying class.

The proposals include:

Beginning the surtax rate at $4,000 net income instead of $8,000 as at present, and $10,000 before the present emergency levies were made, and carrying the surtax to a maximum of 59 per cent. The rate would be 5 per cent on incomes of $6,000 to $8,000 and 6 per cent on incomes of $8,000 to $10,000.

A 35 per cent tax would be levied on undistributed income of personal holding companies, after allowing a 10 per cent dividend rate.

A reduction of 50 to 25 per cent of the possible tax on corporation surplus was proposed.

Reduction of the depreciation allowance by 50 per cent also was proposed.

STRIKE AT LOOPHOLES

Corporations doing business abroad would be hit by a proposal to allow payment of foreign tax merely as a credit instead of a deduction against the American tax.

Taking of "paper profit" losses in speculation against earned income, taking of losses through reorganization of companies and other similar revisions were proposed to close loopholes.

Representative Frank Crowther (Rep.), of New York, a committee member, announced he would offer a general manufacturers' sales tax to take the place of the present excise taxes on gasoline, furs, jewelry, soft drinks, sporting goods and other articles.

FINANCIERS LED BANK ACT WAR, GLASS SAYS

Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—Aroused by criticism of the new bank law that bears his name, Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, told Senate investigators today that New York bankers led the opposition to it which crystallized in a filibuster conducted by Huey Long and others.

Glass confessed he was in a "savage humor" as he confronted Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, with the charge. The Virginian said he had gotten out of a sick bed to appear.

FIND COMMON GROUND

Before the session was over, however, Aldrich and Glass found many of their banking ideas were the same, including the view that a unified banking system was desirable to supplant the present federal and state setups.

In his preliminary statement, Glass charged that it was a direct violation of New York law for the Chase bank to vote $100,000 a year retirement pay to Albert H. Wiggin, its former chairman.

Aldrich contended that the retirement pay, which Wiggin recently gave up, was legal, but said the bank board now felt it made a mistake in voting it in view of disclosures in the Senate inquiry.

Glass showed up for the first time in many weeks. His appearance was inspired by Aldrich's recommendation last week for strengthening the bank law.

'WANTS STRAITJACKET'

Aldrich, Glass said, apparently wanted to put the entire banking community into a "straitjacket."

The committee announced that before concluding its Chase inquiry it would investigate operations of a $10,000,000 pool in Seaboard Air Line stock in which Harvey Couch and other prominent men participated three or four years ago. Couch now is a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Aldrich said it "may be necessary to have a constitutional amendment to get a unified banking system."

Glass asked:

"Are you in favor of a unified banking system?"

The banker replied:

"Yes."

Glass added:

"So am I, but we are in a minority, particularly in Congress."

ALDRICH AIRS VIEWS

Outlining his views on branch banking, Aldrich said a branch banking system, if suddenly applied, would be a "haphazard assembling by promoters."

Aldrich proposed a tax on new state banks with inadequate capital; recapitalization of small banks through the R. F. C.; branch banking by national banks within city limits and adjacent counties regardless of state law.

The banker said branch banking was preferable to chain or group banking. Glass remarked:

ALLIES OPPOSE HITLER DEMAND

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Universal Service.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—Chancellor Hitler's demand for a short-term army of 300,000 men, in return for his "agreeing" to present status of the highly-armed powers, will be rejected by the former Allies, it is learned.

At the same time, it was indicated, direct talks between France and Germany are virtually at a standstill. Progress of other secret diplomatic negotiations to date indicate a critical stage is approaching.

The United States and Soviet Russia are reported backing up England, France and Italy in refusing to consent to German rearmament on the scale Hitler proposes. Mussolini is bitterly opposed to any such concession to Germany.

Mussolini is said to feel that granting Germany an army greater than 200,000 would be the signal for a land armament race. Disarmament at sea has already been complicated by Japan's demand for increased tonnage and England's conversion to the expensive type of heavy cruiser.

BRITAIN DODGES IRISH CRISIS

International News Service.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The British government today flatly refused to state whether it would consider Irish secession from the commonwealth as a "cause for war or other aggressive action."

The government had been challenged by President Eamonn De Valera, of the Irish Free State Executive Council, to tell exactly what action would be taken in the event of secession. But J. H. Thomas, Dominions Minister, rejected the challenge as based upon "purely hypothetical circumstances."

The government's attitude was made known in a note handed to John W. Dulanty, Irish Free State High Commissioner here, who telephoned it to De Valera in Dublin.

Thomas then read the note in the House of Commons. In it, he declared that Britain stood on the principles of the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921, which binds the Free State to the crown, and could not believe that the Free State intended to repudiate it. He added:

"Consequently, the government does not feel called upon to say what attitude it would adopt in circumstances it regards as purely hypothetical."

Burial Ground Safe From Debt Seizure

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Cemetery lots, if someone is buried in one of them, can't be seized for non-payment of a debt.

Judge J. William Brooks so ruled yesterday when he issued a stay of execution to prevent Charles Ploehn from taking possession on two cemetery lots belonging to Charles Eggert, against whom Ploehn had won a judgment of $586 for non-payment of a loan.

DOUBLE ATTACK OF G. O. P. HITS NRA POLICY

Program of Roosevelt Assailed by Fess, National Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A dual attack upon administration policies came today from high Republican quarters in statements that urged business be given a chance to work out its own problems and that charged most of the present criticism was originating in Democratic ranks.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, a former chairman of the Republican National Committee, told newspapermen there could be no substantial recovery under present administration policies and that business should be allowed to carve its own path with a minimum of interference.

'EPITHETS' DENOUNCED

The Republican National Committee meanwhile issued its second anti-administration pamphlet bearing the sextuple title: "Tories," "Chiselers," "Dead Cats," "Witch Doctors," "Bank Wreckers" and "Traitors."

The pamphlet said the Roosevelt forces were answering critics with "epithets," but that "it is the 'forgotten man' of 1932 Roosevelt-ian oratory who complains that he still is in the category."

It added that the criticism "did not originate with partisan opponents of the President" but with "outstanding members of the Democratic party." A foreword said:

"The bitterest of the criticism has come from those to whom the President made an especial appeal in his campaign for election—the farmer, the small businessman, the man with a small factory and the city consumer."

SEES BLOW AT BUSINESS

Fess, assistant Republican leader of the Senate, said "all that has thus far been done is confined to relief work, and most of it at the expense of permanent recovery."

He described the monetary program as so "chaotic and uncertain" as to make business revival impossible; asserted the NRA was keeping many key businesses "in the red" through increased costs and inability to obtain credit, and said corporate financing had been rendered impossible by what he valled the "penalizing character" of the securities act.

Beck Issues Challenge For NRA Legality Test

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(Universal.)—A bristling attack on the constitutionality of NRA, coupled with a challenge to Donald Richberg, its chief counsel, to facilitate a test case in the United States Supreme Court, was made last night by James M. Beck, former United States Solicitor General.

Referring to a previous statement by Richberg that no "competent lawyer" challenged validity of NRA, Beck said:

"So far as this wild statement of Mr. Richberg's is concerned, the answer is that I have yet to discuss this subject with a lawyer not in employ of the government, and not a theoretical professor of law in some school, who did not express the opinion that essential features of NRA as to regulation of trade and industry wholly within a state are unconstitutional."

FEARS FASCISM THROUGH NRA

The NRA is the beginning of a backward reactionary movement which, if not halted, will lead to Fascism, A. J. Muste, chairman of the Conference for Progressive Labor Action, told the Hungry Club yesterday. He said in part:

"Unless the NRA is curbed it will lower the general standard of living, consolidate industrial power and make either Fascism or actual revolution inevitable.

"American workers will not submit to living upon a subsistence level, although they have been fairly submissive during the past few years. When they find the NRA has failed to restore prosperity, however, a sudden change will occur in the workers' attitude and they will overthrow the policy as decisive as they elected Roosevelt."

Pope Receives Farley, Sends Greeting to U. S.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Pope Pius granted an audience of 20 minutes yesterday to James A. Farley, Postmaster General of the United States, and Mrs. Farley, who arrived in Italy Saturday on the ship that brought Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff.

The Pontiff expressed "the happiest predictions" for the prosperity of the United States and his warmest personal sympathy to President Roosevelt and the American people.

He charged Farley with conveying these auguries to the President and the American nation in an interview in which he spoke chiefly about American affairs.

He presented the Postmaster General with a holy medal, and three additional ones for his children, and gave Mrs. Farley a rosary.

Widow Held for Killing Kin Who Slew Husband

International News Service.

SAN SALVADOR, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Melida Moisant Hockwald, accused of killing her cousin, Bertin Moisant, former Los Angeles cameraman, to avenge the death of her husband, Louis W. Hockwald, was held in the local prison today after an unsuccessful attempt to flee.

Police captured her after she fired five bullets at Moisant in a San Salvador hotel at 6:30 o'clock last night.

Moisant, several months ago, killed Hockwald, formerly a San Franciscan, in a quarrel over control of a sugar plantation, but was acquitted.

Moisant had arranged a farewell party at the Neuvo Mundo Hotel for his wife, sailing today for San Francisco. He was standing in the hotel lobby when Mrs. Hockwald suddenly appeared.

Without warning she opened fire and Moisant fell.

Moisant's body will be shipped to California.

RHETA WYNEKOOP'S BODY EXHUMED IN SURPRISE MOVE

HASTY AUTOPSY CLOAKED IN SECRECY

Prosecution Speeding Case; Dr. Alice Collapses

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Preparing for the trial next month of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, under indictment for murder, prosecutors and Coroner's physicians today studied results of a secret exhumation of the body of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop.

Re-examination of Mrs. Wynekoop's body was swiftly carried out at Indianapolis on orders of Coroner Frank Walsh, who explained the exhumation was decided on to corroborate medical evidence to be used against the woman physician and mother-in-law of the slain girl.

Dr. James Kearns and Dr. John Frost, who made the examination, refused to discuss their findings, and on their arrival here made a report to Coroner Walsh.

HASTY AUTOPSY

When the hasty autopsy was concluded the body was replaced in its grave in Crown Hill Cemetery, Indianapolis. No hint was made of the exhumation until permission was granted by Rheta's father, Burdine Gardner, and an order obtained from Judge Frank Baker at Indianapolis.

Coroner Walsh said the second autopsy was carried out to recheck the findings of Dr. Thomas Dwyer, whose original autopsy report stated that Mrs. Wynekoop died from a bullet wound fired into her back while lying unclothed on an operating table in the Wynekoop home.

In a signed statement, later repudiated, Dr. Wynekoop said her daughter-in-law died from asphyxiation by an overdose of chloroform administered during an examination. The coroner explained:

"We are getting ready to meet any medical testimony the defense may raise. As a result of the second autopsy the state will have Dr. Kearns and Dr. Frost to bear out Dr. Dwyer's report on the cause of death, on the chloroform burns about the girl's mouth and other details on which the state will rely to obtain a conviction."

The trial of Dr. Wynekoop has been set for January 4.

Meanwhile the brilliant 62-year-old physician remains in the County Jail infirmary, where she collapsed yesterday before a scheduled court arraignment.

Earle Wynekoop, husband of the dead girl, is being held on a warrant charging him with being an accessory before the fact of Rheta's murder.

LE GALLIENNE SPEAKS KIND WORDS HERE

But Flashlight Makes Her 'Ill' and She Scolds Photographer

Eva Le Gallienne, close-lipped about her foray with Philadelphia's society folk last Friday, had only kind words for a comparable Pittsburgh audience that packed the William Penn Hotel ballroom late yesterday to hear her plea for a national repertory theater before the Pittsburgh Drama League.

But she had plenty to say about the loud-speaker system in the hall and a news photographer who caused her to forget her lines when he set off three flash bulbs just as she was giving "selfish real estate men in the theater business" a thorough tongue lashing.

'PLEASE BE KIND'

Previously she had refused to comment upon the Philadelphia affair, asking a reporter:

"Please be kind to me, won't you?"

Miss Le Gallienne got off to a bad start. As soon as the loud speakers echoed her words, she demanded to know:

"How do I turn off this thing? I can't bear it."

Then she resumed her lecture, but only for a moment—throwing up her hands as the photographer snapped her picture from the balcony of the ballroom. With all the drama at her command, the actress turned upon him:

"Young man, you don't know what that means to me. I nearly lost my two hands in an explosion that looked just like that. It really makes me quite sick."

POURS GLASS OF WATER

She poured herself a glass of water, studied her notes for a moment and then raked the talkies over the coals with:

"They have done at least one good thing for the theater. They have purged it of a great surplus of nonsense. I mean by that, that a commercially-minded theater manager formerly would produce some such thing as 'Getting Gerty's Stocking.' Now he will turn to the talkies, because there is more money in them."

She declared that it was such managers who have caused the public to lose confidence in the theater. Returning to her attack on the talkies, she added:

"People who don't want to go to the theater because they have to think, can go to the talkies."

MARYLAND CALM AFTER FINDING GIRL'S BODY

Autopsy Fails to Show Signs of Violence; Await Chemist

International News Service.

PRINCESS ANNE, Md., Dec. 5.—Excitement in Somerset County over the finding of the body of a 20-year-old girl, Edna Morris, in a wood by two Negroes, subsided today as authorities awaited reports from Baltimore chemists.

Princess Anne, during October, was the scene of the lynching of George Armwood, young Negro, and last week saw the county overrun by state troops and police who arrested four of nine alleged members of the Armwood lynch mob.

The body was found yesterday by two Negroes, near their shack, a mile from her home. She had disappeared Friday. Her parents had not reported her absence, believing she may have eloped with a youth in Salisbury, a nearby county seat.

An autopsy performed by county authorities revealed the girl had not been attacked or suffered from physical violence.

After questioning, the two Negroes were released.

ADMITS GUN THEFT

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Carl Fisher, 24, one of two men arrested in connection with the lynching of Lloyd Warner, 19, Negro, and alleged attacker of a white girl, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of stealing a pistol owned by the county Sheriff.

VETS EXPEL ROLPH

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The National Executive Committee of the National War Veterans Association, Inc., today made public a resolution expelling Gov. Rolph, of California, from its national advisory board.

The resolution was adopted yesterday. It charged "that Gov. Rolph's proven gubernatorial unfitness so obviously demonstrated by his actions and statements in connection with the San Jose lynchings, has likewise made him unfit to be continued in an advisory or in any other capacity in or with this organization."

Yesterday telegrams were sent to President Roosevelt and Gov. Rolph by 80 authors, editors, newspaper writers and publishers organized into the Writers' League Lynching, protesting "against the recent wave of lynching and mob violence."

DANCER GLORIA BEATEN UP

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Adelaide Gloria, once called "The girl with the most beautiful legs in the world," was suffering today from bruises and mouth abrasians, inflicted last night, she said, by a man she encountered on a vacant lot.

Police were investigating the story of the 32-year-old dancer, who said the encounter occurred as she was returning to her home in Bayside, Queens.

She had been visiting an actress friend, whose home is across the vacant lot, she said.

On her way back, she related, a man called her, using her first name.

Asked what he wanted, the man covered her mouth with cotton, she said, adding:

"Then everything went black."

The dancer two months ago filed a suit for $250,000 against a wealthy Cuban importer, Francis X. Xiques, charging he had attacked her.

Playboy by Any Name Still McCready

String of Aliases Bared in Trust Fund Suit

Harrison R. McCready, alias Harry Hays, alias Harry Smith, alias Harry Jones, alias Roger Knox—

Those are a few of the names used by Pittsburgh's ace playboy and spendthrift in eluding reporters and the general public, so he claims.

Roger Knox, one of the least known of his aliases, was revealed yesterday in Common Pleas Court yesterday where his $150,000 trust fund case is being heard by Judge Frank P. Patterson.

McCready's father-in-law, James N. Long, testified that that was the pseudonym he used in addressing several letters to the playboy while he was staying at a hotel in Grantsville, Md.

He told McCready's attorney, Charles J. Margiotti, during the cross-examination:

"Bob Kennedy (McCready's bodyguard) told me that's the only thing they knew him by up there."

McCready explained the name after court adjourned, saying:

"I was trying to avoid the limelight. Two reporters were looking for me. You can't blame a guy for using his wits.

"Even Bob Kennedy had another name—he was known as 'Bob Burnett'."

As for the alias of Harry Hays, which he goes by at the Embassy Apartments in Mt. Lebanon, and which was mentioned by Plaintiff Attorney Oliver K. Eaton earlier in the case, he said:

"That's the way I avoid the East Liberty drunks. One drunk in the apartment is enough.

"I used the name of 'Harry Smith' and 'Harry Jones' while I was in the hospital after my toots. I used them because of the fact that I didn't want anybody to know where I was."

McCready is seeking to break a $150,000 trust fund set up for his first wife, Mrs. F. H. Welfer, of 1028 North Highland avenue, and her 4-year-old child, Peggy, in 1930.

Margiotti asked Long while exhibiting the letter which he sent to Maryland:

"Did you ever ask McCready to destroy any of those letters?"

Long answered:

"I did not, I never had any reason for anything like that."

Margiotti then read a postscript on a letter dated February 21, 1933. It read:

"Be sure and destroy every one of my letters as it will be safer for you in the end."

Long gave a reason for this explaining that he did not want other persons to know that McCready was getting extra money sent to him.

M'Cready to Climb Wagon as 'Dry' Era Ends

Harrison McCready, the free-spending playboy, who during the 14-year prohibition period did his best to drink the country dry, today announced that he was climbing on the wagon.

On the very first day of repeal, McCready revealed the best of intentions. He said he planned to refrain from taking even one more drink.

2ND JURY OUT AT DECATUR

DECATUR, Ala., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—A decision in the case of Clarence Norris, second of seven Negro defendants in the "Scottsboro Case," to be retried here on a charge of attacking a white woman, rested today with a Morgan County jury.

The jury retired last night after receiving an hour and 20-minute charge from Judge W. W. Callahan, but requested and received permission from the court to defer deliberations until 8:30 a. m. today.

Norris was tried on a charge of attacking Mrs. Victoria Price, the same offense for which Heywood Patterson was convicted a third time last week, with death fixed as the penalty. Mrs. Price and a companion, Ruby Bates, were alleged to have been attacked by the Negroes as they rode a freight train in Jackson County in 1931.

Trials of the remaining five defendants in the "Scottsboro Case" today were postponed indefinitely by Judge W. W. Callahan, presiding, at the request of defense counsel.

INSULL FACING BAN BY GREECE

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 2.—(AP.)—An interpellation asking the Greek government what it had decided about the return of Samuel J. Insull to the United States was deposited in the Senate today by Senator Mavrogordatos.

Because of misunderstandings and friendly Greco-American relations, the Senator said, he believes it necessary to fordbid Insull to remain here further.

He added that he would speak fully about the case before the Senate.

Meanwhile, there were other indications that Insull's refuge here is becoming more insecure as the government studies how to satisfy the United States' demand for his extradition without diminishing Greek prestige.

BANK CASHIER FOUND DEAD

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 5.—Following closely on the indictment of four officers of the restricted First National Bank of Johnstown, Charles E. McCahan, 53, assistant cashier, today was found shot to death in the basement of the bank. A bullet wound was through his head.

Two indictments were returned against David Barry, president; Jacob M. Murdoch and Harry Swank, vice presidents, and Patrick F. McAneny, cashier and director, by the federal grand jury in Pittsburgh within the last two weeks.

They were indicted on November 17 on a charge of misapplication of $10,000 in 1930, and a few days later were indicted on charges of misapplication and making false entries involving $105,000 between November 21, 1930, and April 21, 1931.

The bank has been operating under a conservator.

Corliss Palmer Wins Divorce From Brewster

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—Corliss Palmer, beautiful blonde "Georgia Peach," today was granted a divorce from Eugene Brewster, one-time millionaire magazine publisher, whom she first met in 1920 when she was winner in a beauty contest conducted by one of his periodicals.

Speaking in a soft Southern drawl, the famous "Georgia Peach" told Superior Judge Dudley S. Valentine that Brewster, "neglected me shamefully."

She added:

"He didn't seem to care anything about me. When I wanted to go to shows and so on, he just told me he would rather play solitaire."

"He was not polite to our friends when they visited us, either. He is a writer, you know, and he would insist upon reading his stories and things when we had company. And you know, judge, that wansn't very nice."

The granting of the divorce wrote "finis" to 13 years of sometimes romantic, sometimes turbulent association of the beauty and the publisher.

Hearst Presents Japan Its First Buffaloes

By JAMES R. YOUNG,
Universal Service Special Cable.

TOKIO, Dec. 5.—Flag-decked motorcars and trucks formed a colorful caravan from Yokohama to Tokio today in a 20-mile parade, watched by thousands along the Ginza-Tokio's Broadway—as three bison, the gift of William Randolph Hearst to Matsutaro Shoriki, president of the newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun, were conveyed to the Ueno Zoo.

The bison will have a special building and runway in Spanish architecture, a signal honor to the first buffalo ever to be seen on the hoof in Japan. Yomiuri Shimbun has printed for three days half-page feature stories about American plainsmen and the part they and the buffalo played in American pioneer life.

United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, Mayor Uchisuka of Tokio, and other prominent officials and businessmen will pose before sound cameramen at the formal presentation Tuesday.

Street cars, buses and billboards are posted with red-lettered announcements, over the Mayor's name, announcing the arrival of Mr. Hearst's "generous and unusual gift." Huge banners and posters on the trucks of today's parade bore the inscription:

"These animals are an American gift from Mr. Hearst. They are a symbol of American-Japanese friendship."

There is no word in the Japanese vocubulary for either "bison" or "buffalo," and posters call the animals "suigu," which is approximately "water cow."

Officials of Ueno Zoo are inaugurating "Buffalo Week" starting Wednesday. The Shochiku Theater Company will show 1,000 feet of news reel film in 400 theaters, showing the arrival and unloading and presentation.

LEAGUE OPIUM BOARD LASHED FOR LAXITY

By A. K. STOFFREGEN
Universal Service.

PARIS, Dec. 5.—Charges that the League of Nations' opium board does not deal with the most important phase of the world drug evil—illicit opium traffic in China—are made in a report issued by the Anti-Opium Information Bureau from its headquarters in Geneva.

The report pays tribute to the worthwhile work performed by the league's board in collecting statistics on the world's legitimate narcotic trade, but assails it for failing to consider China as a center of illicit traffic under Article 24 of the Geneva convention of 1925. It says:

A SORDID BATTLE

"The board's members should bear in mind that the opium game is not a drawing-room game, but a sordid battle where, for the sake of easy money, traffickers bring death to millions of individuals.

"Why not leave all legal niceties on one side and view the appalling situation from the angle of the thinking human being? The board then would soon come to the conclusion there is in China today more illicit traffic in narcotics than in any other country."

Illicit opium traffic in China primarily is the work of Japan and Japanese traffickers, the bureau charges. Its report continues:

"China remains the world's principal victim of the illicit traffic in opium and in manufactured opium derivatives. The U. S. A. cleaned up years ago and keeps her record clean, Western and Central Europe are claimed to have considerably reduced, if not altogether ceased, their manufacture for illicit purposes. Turkey and Bulgaria are reported to be cleaning up."

RECORDS ARE FOGGED

The bureau declares great Britain, France, Japan, Portugal and the Netherlands, however, haven't clean records where opium is concerned.

All five, it says, still maintain revenue-yielding opium monopolies in their far eastern territories, and continue to sell opium to addicts and to make new addicts.

In general, the bureau appeals to all foreign governments to prevent exportation to China of machinery destined for the manufacture of opium derivatives.

Certain well-known chemicals, the bureau suggests, which are used almost exclusively for the manufacture of heroin, should be controlled as strictly as any narcotic to which the opium conventions apply.

ASSESSOR MAY BE DEPORTED

Should he be convicted on a narcotic charge, on which he now awaits result of a hearing, Joseph Frank, register assessor of the Second district of the Second Ward, Homestead, will face probable deportation to Russia.

Chief County Investigator Leo Riordan announced he would file quo warranto proceedings today against Frank on grounds that he is not an American citizen. Should this be proved, a narcotic conviction would make his deportation mandatory, Riordan said.

Frank, it was said, served a year in the Atlanta penitentiary for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, and was last year found guilty on an assault and battery charge.

He was born in Russia. His father is a naturalized American but received his papers 13 days after Frank's twenty-first birthday in 1921, Riordan said.

PINCHOT FIGHTS SWEATSHOPS IN ASSEMBLY

the House but killed in the Senate.

Miss Perkins in her telegram said:

"I have noted with appreciation the program of social legislation proposed in the special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

"To many persons the enactment of industrial legislation seems unnecessary at the present time because of the progress made by the federal government under the NRA. It is even asserted that state legislation will only duplicate federal action.

"Through the codes there has been widespread agreement among employers as to standards of hours, wages, and conditions of work. The enforcement machinery of the state departments of labor may well be utilized to uphold and complement the federal codes while these are in effect.

"Far from relaxing efforts now is the time for concerted action in the various states to embody the approved standards in permanent state legislation. When the emergency is over we must rely upon state laws to prevent a possible return to sweatshop conditions."

SOCIAL LEGISLATION

Meanwhile, the Republican political leaders pressing for adjournment of the Legislature next week, the Senate once more threatens to become a barrier to social legislation embodied in the program of Gov. Pinchot, Democrats and some liberals of the Republican party.

Senator Clarence Buckman, of Bucks, who last night frustrated consideration of the demand of Senator Frank J. Harris, Pittsburgh, that the Senate go on record as willing to stay in session until the social justice program was completed, is prepared to continue the fight he made in the last session against old-age assistance, minimum wage and hour bills, and child labor laws.

Harris, taking note of the declaration by the Democratic State Chairman Warren Van Dyke that the Democrats would insist upon consideration of bills desired to meet the challenge, Buckman balked consideration of a Harris resolution to this effect, and a sharp interchange between the two indicated a future fight.

HARRIS 'NEXT GOVERNOR'

During an exchange between the two Senators, "the gentleman from Bucks" termed "the gentleman from Allegheny" "the next Governor of Pennsylvania."

Buckman, while designated as "Pinchot floor leader," is a loyal follower of Joseph R. Grundy, and was one of the handful of Senators who in the last session prevented consideration of the proposed constitutional amendment for old age pensions.

The House, taking up where it left off last year, is prepared to push the social legislation program. By a vote of 175 to 8 it has demanded that the House Labor Committee report for consideration the bills in its possession.

Representative Wilson L. Yeakel, chairman of the committee, and a Grundy man, had intimated he would carry things with a high hand. As a result, Representatives Hiram G. Andrews, Independent, of Johnstown, and Darlington Hoopes, Socialist, Berks County, backed a resolution insisting that Yeakel act. If he does not there is every indication that the House will take the bills from committee.

Boddie Williams, 40, Negro of 313 Pensdale street, suffered lacerations to his leg and neck during a fight with another Negro who attempted to hold him up, Williams told police.

He also was bitten on the cheek. Williams said his assailant was a man he had picked up on the Washington pike near Bridgeville. Williams wounds were treated at Presbyterian Hospital.

Third Class City Permanent Vote Bill Introduced

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—A system of permanent registration of voters in Clairton, Duquesne, McKeesport and all other third-class cities is proposed in a bill introduced by Senator William D. Mansfield, McKeesport.

It would abolish the present system of annual enrollment of voters. Once a voter has registered and enrolled by party, his name would be kept on the list of eligible voters permanently, unless he fails to vote once in four years or moves to another voting division. In either case the voter must register again. Change in party affiliation can be made upon written application of the voter.

No separate registration commission would be set up for third-class cities—to perform duties similar to those which the Pittsburgh Registration Commission performs for that city—instead, the County Commissioners are to act as the registration commission outside of Pittsburgh, without added pay.

They may appoint necessary employes, and a solicitor at not more than $2,000, but also are empowered to designate usual employes of the county to act as registration commission employes, without extra pay.

The Mansfield bill is the fourth of a series of bills which it is expected will be acted upon instead of the Pinchot administration bill which calls for permanent registration in all cities under a single law.

Separate bills have been presented for permanent registration in Pittsburgh, Scranton and Philadelphia, and those three measures, together with the Mansfield bill, are to be pushed. The purpose of four bills, instead of one, was to make it easier to amend the bills according to the needs of cities of different size.

FINDER NAMED MANAGER

Sam Finder, 41, has been notified of his appointment as district manager here for the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, after five years' service with the company. Finder, who has been in charge of the office in the Real Estate Savings Building since last March, is the youngest man to be appointed to a district manager position after such a brief association with the concern.

Mr. Finder.

He joined the firm in Louisville, Ky., as an agent in 1928 and succeeds Russell E. Fitzgerald, who retired as manager because of ill health. Finder lives at 5639 Melvin street.

SCHOOL AIDING JOBLESS OPENS

Classes to aid unemployed teachers and students were to start today in Scott High School in North Braddock at the expense of the federal government.

F. D. Zuerner, superintendent of North Braddock schools, who negotiated with officials at Washington, has obtained three former instructors from the University of Pittsburgh to form the faculty of the borough's "depression college."

Arrangements have been made with the University of Pittsburgh for courses to correspond with those of the university, although it will be necessary for students to take examinations if they wish to continue their studies there.

Zuerner stated that he believed that more teachers would be required in the near future.

The salaries of the faculty will be paid directly by the government.

COYNE BLOCKS COUNTY-U. S. LOAN PLAN

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—The Einstein bill, to create an "authority" of three members to be named by the County Commissioners, with power to borrow money from the federal government for the construction of self-liquidating public works projects in Allegheny County, remained blockaded in the Senate today.

Senator-County Commissioner William D. Mansfield, pushing the bill, said he had been given assurances of support by all state Republican leaders, but it is understood that Senator James J. Coyne is balking considering until he has had further time to study the question.

Under the Einstein bill the "authority" would be created to borrow approximately $31,000,000 from the federal government for the building of bridges and tunnels.

TOLLS TO BE CHARGED

Tolls which would be charged would provide funds with which to pay off the debt. Through this system, according to the County Commissioners, the federal loan would not become a charge against the county's bonding limit.

Assistant County Solicitors Mortimer B. Lesher and Churchill B. Mehard, together with James Rae, of the Tax Board, were in Harrisburg to explain features of the plan.

To meet the objections of Democrats, who balked at the original plan of the Commissioners to name the authority board for six-year terms, Senator Mansfield has prepared an amendment which would make the tenure of office no greater than that of the present Board of Commissioners. Under this plan a new county board would be able to alter membership in the authority if it desired in January of 1936.

ELLENBOGEN PLAN

Democrats still were clinging to their plan for revenue bonds, worked out by Congressman Henry Ellenbogen. These bonds would be sold to finance the same projects under consideration by the Commissioners, and the proceeds would be available only for construction which would return an income to the county.

The Commissioners and their legal advisers insist that the bonds, even though carrying the revenue provision, would be a charge against the county's bonding power, something they wish to avert. Representatives of the Commissioners today claimed to have legal opinions that the bonds could not be segregated.

The Ellenbogen plan is being held up in the House.

Democrats Charge State Relief Waste

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Democratic legislators voted at a caucus last night to demand an investigation of "waste and extravagance" in the distribution of relief funds.

Representative James L. Quinn, Allegheny, who says he intends to introduce a resolution calling for the inquiry, said he wants to know about "criminal extravagance and racketeering" in the disbursement of money appropriated by the federal and state governments for relief of the needy.

Braddock Youth Burned by Kerosene

Joseph Bartko, 19, of 1214 Washington street, Braddock, was in Braddock General Hospital today with burns on the face and body suffered when his clothing ignited while he was pouring kerosene into the kitchen stove last night.

Other members of the household rolled Bartko in a blanket when the blazing fluid showered his clothing.

TOWNSHIP ROAD PLAN FOUGHT

With many of their leaders opposed to Gov. Pinchot's methods of financing the improvements of township roads the Allegheny County Association of Township Supervisors will hold its annual meeting Friday in the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium. Gov. Pinchot proposed that the state take over 53,000 miles of township roads and improve them as part of an unemployment relief program.

Many of the township supervisors say they favor instead an allotment of gasoline tax and motor license funds to townships for road maintenance under supervision of township authorities.

Speakers invited to address the all-day meeting include State Senator Herman P. Brandt, Judge Ralph H. Smith, Controller Robert G. Woodside, State Representative J. H. McClure and Burgess Louis Hagmaier, of Aspinwall. J. E. Long is president of the association and A. P. Stahl is secretary. Invited to the meeting are the supervisors, auditors and secretaries of Allegheny County's 29 second-cass townships.

Liquor Sign Ban Proposed in Assembly

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Signs advertising liquors outside places where repeal beverages are served are prohibited by a bill introduced by Senator Joseph C. Trainer, Philadelphia, to amend the new state liquor control act.

When the act was pending in the Senate before passage last week, a provision was inserted at Trainer's request to give the State Liquor Control Board wide powers to regulate liquor advertising of all kinds. When objections were made that this power was too broad, Trainer said he had intended to ban outdoor advertising only. Upon Trainer's motion the Senate last week struck from the control act the clause for regulation of all liquor advertising.

House Votes Bonus Expense Measure

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Two bills, appropriating funds to the Department of Military Affairs, were passed finally last night by the Senate and go to the House.

One, sponsored by Senator Reed, Dauphin, would appropriate $10,000 for preliminary expenses incidental to payment of a $50,000,000 soldier bonus. The other, by Senator Pierson, Lancaster, would provide $350,000 for purchase of supplies, materials and equipment to improve the military reservation at Indiantown Gap.

PA. INCOME TAX HEARING DUE

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The House Ways and Means Committee holds a public hearing today on the Sterling (Philadelphia) bill providing for a tax on personal incomes.

The measure would tax incomes up to $10,000 at the rate of 1-per cent; between $10,000 and $50,000, 2-per cent, and over $50,000, 3-per cent.

Single persons would be given an exemption of $1,000 and heads of families $2,500.

The tax would be payable on 1933 incomes.

A delegation representing the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League left Pittsburgh this morning for Harrisburg to urge the House Ways and Means Committee to report favorably the Sterling income tax bill designed to provide state funds for educational purposes.

Those making the trip were I. Leonard Aronson, president, and C. V. Shoup, executive director of the league; Dr. J. J. Buchanan, E. Lowry Humes, John Dimling, John McSorley and Philip Huss.

PENNSYLVANIA RATIFIES REPEAL

1933, at 12:55 p. m., a convention duly held in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania ratified on behalf of the said Commonwealth the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the duly authenticated papers evidencing the action of said convention are being forwarded to you."

RACE TO WASHINGTON

A race between an airplane and motorcycle developed in the rush to get a certified copy of the ballot to the national capitol. One copy was sent by James J. Haggerty, crack motorcycle rider of the State Highway Patrol. Another was taken by automobile to the Harrisburg airport to be carried to Washington in a plane piloted by Maj. Victor Dallin, of the state national guard. If weather conditions prevent Dallin's flight, the copy will be forwarded by mail.

The only speech of the convention was made by W. W. Montgomery, Jr., of Radnor. He said:

"This is a day for which we have long awaited.

"The Legislature of this state and many others made a great mistake in ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment. We now have an opportunity to correct that mistake."

Then came the roll call and the fulfillment of wishes expressed by voters last month.

Utah Delegates Delay Decisive Repeal Vote

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Definite plans for delaying until after 7 p. m., (mountain standard time) Utah's deciding action on national prohibition repeal were announced today as delegates to the state ratification convention went into caucus.

It was expected that Utah's vote as the 36th state to ratify the twenty-first amendment would be cast about 7:30 p. m.

As the 21 delegates entered the caucus for selection of permanent officers and other preliminary business it was announced that definite plans provided for a recess this afternoon until 7 o'clock.

Business of the convention prior to the recess included formalities of organization and addresses by Gov. Henry H. Blood and Anthony W. Ivins, member of the first presidency of the Latter Day Saints Church and one of the surviving delegates to Utah's original constitutional convention in 1895.

This evening the reports of the credentials and resolutions committees will provide the occasion for an address by Franklin Riter, chairman of the resolution committee and head of the Utah League for Prohibition Repeal. He will offer the resolution for ratification and the final vote is expected about 7:30 o'clock.

Ohio Delegates Meet, 35th State to Ratify

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Ohio's convention to vote repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment got under way in the House of Representatives chamber here at 1:11 o'clock this afternoon.

Gov. George White called the session to order, and immediately introduced the Rev. John Malick, of Cincinnati, who gave the invocation.

The large chamber was well crowded when the Governor brought the convention to order. After the 49 delegates took their seats, the roll was called. Three delegates were to be elected to fill vacancies, two caused by deaths and one by a resignation.

George M. Neffner, statistician in the Secretary of State's office, called the roll of delegates.

The Governor's speech was a brief manuscript of about 600 words, in which he outlined the duties of the delegates and impressed on them that "the people of Ohio have conferred upon you a signal honor."

Each delegates was instructed to march to the chairman's table and sign the resolution as soon as his name was called.

The routine of the convention progressed rapidly. Within 20 minutes after it was called to order, Gov. White had delivered his address and Sidney G. Stricker, of Cincinnati, delivered an address nominating Atlee Pomerene, former United State Senator, as honorary president of the convention. Pomerene was elected without opposition.

Penna. Liquor Store Job List Deadline Fought

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—An eleventh-hour squabble over applications for state liquor store jobs was carried into the Legislature last night.

Members of the General Assembly and state officials received telegrams from constituents protesting that the deadline set for filing applications—midnight, Thursday—should be extended.

Some said that earlier instructions should have been issued as to where to obtain the applications.

These are obtainable at the Department of Public Instruction, and some of the messages said it would be impossible for many applicants to obtain papers, fill them out and get them back to Harrisburg in time to be considered.

There were suggestions that Gov. Pinchot permit the board to extend the deadline.

The Department of Public Instruction, wading through a mass of applications, explained today that many applicants are seeking to qualify for more than one post. The department made it plain, however, that it is not possible for an applicant to do this.

Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of the department, emphasized that all requests for blanks and circulars be sent to his department and that all applications must be filled in, sworn to and mailed with a postmark not later than midnight Thursday. They will be accepted until noon Friday when delivered in person or by messenger at the department offices.

DRY IN CHARGE HERE

Dr. Ben. G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh Public Schools and by admission "a traditional dry," will be in charge of the civil service examinations for state liquor store jobs here, according to word received today from Harrisburg.

Detailed plans for the conduct of the examinations are not available here yet, Dr. Graham preferring any announcement to come from Harrisburg. He said:

"We will do everything requested of us by the State Department of Public Education. We have been asked to cooperate."

Two of the larger public schools of Pittsburgh will likely be made available for the examinations, it was revealed. Just who will act as examiners has not been determined, but it has been suggested that a group of public school teachers be assigned to that duty.

Further details are expected from Harrisburg in the next day or two.

SENATE BOOSTS TAX ON LIQUOR UNTIL JAN. 2

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—With ratification of repeal in Pennsylvania only minutes away, the Senate today passed finally two bills to tax liquor and increase permit fees for distilleries, breweries and wineries.

One bill, sponsored by Representative Morton Witkin, Philadelphia, and given a severe jostling during its passage through the two houses, imposes a tax of $2 a gallon on liquor manufactured or imported between the date of enactment and January 2.

It started its voyage as a "permanent" $1 tax bill but the Senate doubled the ante. As changed, it will not levy a permanent tax for the reason that state liquor stores, beginning operation January 2, pay no tax on liquors.

The bill also was altered to provide that liquor made in Pennsylvania and shipped into other states shall not be subject to tax if the state into which the liquor is going has no tax.

In brief, the measure is effective as a revenue producer only until the turn of the year.

The other bill approved, authored by Representative Thomas B. Wilson, McKean, sets up this schedule of permit fees:

Distilleries, $2,500 to $25,000, depending on capacity.
Breweries, $1,000.
Wineries, $250.

The Senate today also passed finally the Ziesenheim, Erie, bill to appropriate $10,000 for a liquor control investigation commission to study reaction to state liquor stores.

The Senate last night passed finally a bill to extend a $1.24-a-barrel tax on 3.2 beer to all malt beverages after repeal. It goes to the Governor for his signature.

Only one of the seven bills embodying the Chief Executive's ideas on liquor control and taxation remains in the General Assembly. It is the Zimmerman bill removing the alcohol content limitations from the 1933 beer act and making all malt beverages taxable. This is scheduled for final passage tomorrow.

STATE ALLOWS STRONGER BEER

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The State Liquor Control Board explained today that Pennsylvania brewers may manufacture and sell beer of any alcoholic content under their present permits on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Robert S. Gawthrop, chairman of the board, announced the ruling. He added that any change in the permit fees to be charged after December 31 will depend upon legislative action on the Wilson bill, approved by the House and pending in the Senate.

Under the 1933 beer control act, passed by the regular session, the fee for brewers was set at $100.

The Wilson bill, which amends existing laws to conform to after-repeal—including the supplanting of the alcohol permit board by the new state liquor control board—provides an annual permit fee of $1,000 for brewers.

State Refuses To Ban Liquor In Dry Towns

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—As Pennsylvania turned its back on prohibition today, towns and villages which have opposed the return of liquor pleaded with the state not to grant licenses to their residents.

The Liquor Control Board, in the midst of an eleventh-hour rush for applications, received protests from all sections of the state, but most of them were from western counties, where some communities are proud of the fact that they have barred intoxicants for more than half a century.

The control board told these communities that under the new law, it must grant licenses if the applicant has met the requirements—is a "proper" person with a respectable establishment.

The board has no alternative, it was explained, until the protesting community has exercised its right of local option and has set up its own new regulations barring drink.

The state may refuse licenses where this has been done. Old regulations were junked with enactment of the new control law.

Agents of the control board explained the protests can have no effect on the system of liquor stores to be set up by the state on January 2.

Today's appeals came for the most part from church, school and municipal officials.

Hold your pencil about two inches above the point... Lift your wrist and arm so they don't touch the table... Place the point of the pencil on the first dot... Close your eyes and draw a line exactly four inches long... Repeat the process a second time, then a third time. See how nearly correct your lines are. WINE GLASSES' SALE BOOMS IN STORES HERE

Wine and wine glasses have launched a new spurt to the "Buy American" campaign as American wine manufacturers prepare to seize the market and hold it from European competition.

The predictions of manufacturers that wine will have a more important place on the American table than prior to the dry era were being borne out by department store and glassware dealers who report a tremendous increase in sales.

While no wine shipments are expected to reach Pittsburgh before tomorrow, Mr. and Mrs. Pittsburgher today continue to prepare for serving it. The stores report that the buying trend is for the complete service, meaning all the necessary types of glasses to serve properly the various wines.

The manufacturers' representatives foresee a wine drinking nation. Their predictions are based upon the heavy orders being received from hotels, restaurants and clubs. One reason is advanced that prohibition brought an increased practice in making wines at home.

Prices will not be stabilized until the state stores operate, winery representatives say. While hotels and restaurants expect domestic wines to sell at $5 to $6 a standard quart, the manufacturers predict the early price of $1.50 to $3.50. These prices will have little competition against the predicted prices of $8 to $10 for importations, it was pointed out.

The proper service will be an important matter for the host or hostess. An educational series will start in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph. It will be written by A. Albert, maitre d'hotel of the William Penn Hotel, a recognized authority who was reared in the wine fields of Europe.

This series will relate the history of wines; then specify the proper wine to serve on every occasion; then deal with questions of temperature, etc., and in detail with the proper type glasses.

RUM TAX SUIT AIRED DEC. 14

The hearings on suits filed in Federal Court by three distilling companies attacking the constitutionality of the $2 floor tax under the Cordier act, will be held December 14.

Under a temporary injunction issued by the Federal Court, state authorities have been restrained from interfering with operations of the Joseph S. Finch & Co., A. Overholt & Co. and the Large Distilling Company, pending the hearing.

The court had previously set tomorrow for the hearing on the application of the Finch company, and December 12 for the other two concerns.

Seven Middies Face Dismissal for Rum

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Rec. 5.—(Universal.) — Possible dismissal faces one or more of the seven midshipmen confined on the Naval Academy station ship, Reina Mercedes, as the result either of drinking or of having whisky in their possession.

Five of the midshipmen were ordered confined to the ship for a week on the charge of being under the influence of liquor after the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia.

Bay State Liquor Control Bill Signed

BOSTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Gov. Ely signed the hard liquor control act last night, thus legalizing the sale of liquor in Massachusetts upon the repeal of national prohibition today. As soon as repeal becomes effective, hotels, restaurants, drug stores and package goods stores may sell spiritous liquors.

The Legislature finally agreed to a referendum on taverns be held in cities and towns.

PROHIBITION'S KNELL RUNG BY 3 STATES

CONTROVERSY CONTINUES

Just as the almost unanimous approval of the Eighteenth Amendment did not settle the matter once and for all, neither does the preponderant action on its rejection signal an end.

Controversy now smouldering will crackle into open argument when the Senate and House return to work on liquor taxes and attempt to get a model control law for the capital city.

Whatever the uncertainties, those who voted left no doubt where they stood. Thirty-three states before today had notified the State Department of repeal triumphs, Texas only yesterday. Until North and South Carolina voted, the story was everywhere the same—generally by staggering margins.

Prohibition strongholds in New England, South and West gave way before anti-prohibition advances so militant as to recall crusades against alcoholic beverages dating well back into the last century. Now the organized drys are reshaping their lines and say the combat will go on. Wet organizations in some instances are disbanding.

Utah, so long considered impregnable for the drys, made it a point to have its convention be the thirty-sixth and decisive one.

PROCLAMATION READY

William Phillips, as acting secretary of state, had sent along word to officials in all three that a quick message to him would be welcomed in order to speed the repeal proclamation. Attorney General Cummings' ruling was that repeal took effect the moment the thirty-sixth convention wound up its business, but fast work on the message was wanted just the same to make repeal the more "regular" by proclamation.

When the Maine convention acts tomorrow, it will be the thirty-seventh to approve repeal.

States which have not yet had a popular vote on the issue now foreclosed are Georgia, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

Latest compliations show 20,813,208 votes have been cast, with 15,279,216 favoring repeal and 5,533,992 against.

President Roosevelt today looked to his cabinet triumvirate of Secretaries Morgenthau and Wallace and Attorney General Cummings for asurances of official adjustment to the new amendment with a minimum of unsettlement and unpreparedness.

He had the duty of proclaiming the date of repeal, with the accompanying eventual effect of replacing certain federal taxes of over $210,000,000 a year with increased levies on liquor to make up that sum.

TAX LEVIES STUDIED

It was Morgenthau's task to get ready a report on the tax situation in general and liquor taxes in particular, for forwarding next month to a Congress whose committees this week resumed work on the problem.

About the busiest of the many busy places in the city was the office of Joseph H. Choate, Jr., commander of the federal Alcohol Control Administration, who found himself appointed to that responsible job with repeal right on top of him and has the task of cramming into a few days organization work that ordinarily would take many.

His word was "we will be ready," however, as he bustled from a conference with the President having to do with the secret import allotments which have raised such curiosity and concern among beverage exporting nations.

Prohibition agents who have been proceeding under the Volstead act hence orth, with the act legally defunct generally, will have to do only with guarding against liquor shipments into states that forbid them.

In that connection, it will be their duty to prevent shipments into the District of Columbia, where it has been ruled the Volstead act stays in force until Congress legislates liquor control.

So when the celebrations scheduled in some states are in full swing tonight and tomorrow, there will be no legal liquor consumption at such celebrations as happen to crop out in Washington. And when more legislators return for the January convening they will be bereft of local legal liquor.

This situation is not expected to maintain long, however. In the interim, doctor's prescriptions for whisky are freely accessible and a minimum of questions are asked at the well-stocked drug stores in the capital.

Moonshine Seized In North Side Raid

At a hearing in Police Court, George Wagner, 45, living at that address, and five men identified as visitors were held for investigation.

Here's How!

Associated Press.

With the repeal of prohibition these regulations will govern Pennsylvanians:

Between today and January 2 liquor may be sold by the drink, bottle or case in all hotels, restaurants, clubs, boats and dining cars licensed by the State Liquor Control Board.

Effective January 2, liquor by the bottle or case may be sold only in state liquor stores, which begin operation at 9 a. m. that day.

Hotels and restaurants may sell by the drink after January 1, from 7 a. m. to 2 a. m., excepting Sundays, legal holidays and election days.

State stores will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., excepting Sundays, legal holidays and election days. At least 300 will be scattered over the state.

Liquor may not be served across bars, excepting in clubs.

Women are permitted to serve and mix drinks.

Indications are liquor will be expensive until state stores begin operation. Then the price is expected to be about $2 a quart for standard brands of rye whisky.

Present holders of 3.2 beer permits may sell malt beverages of any alcoholic content without obtaining an additional permit, but may not handle liquor.

Liquor Control Board is working at top speed licensing retailers. This work will continue until all applications are acted upon.

State Department of Public Instruction is preparing to hold Civil Service examinations December 16 for aspirants to state store organization jobs. Tens of thousands are applying for the 2,000 positions to be created. The deadline for applications is noon, December 8.

U. S. DRY AGENTS STAY ON JOB

Those optimistic anti-prohibitionists who thought that the dry agents of Pittsburgh would fold up their tents and steal silently away with the coming of repeal were sadly disillusioned today.

And they're going to stay until ordered otherwise, J. M. Moss, special agent in charge of enforcement in the Pittsburgh district, warned today.

Moss said his force will continue to prosecute any violations under the revenue act or any other federal statute—prosecute, that is, any violations which are detected.

WARNS DRIVERS ON DRINKING

With the passing of prohibition today warning was issued to motorists by Lewis W. McIntyre, city traffic engineer.

Pointing out that passenger car registration has jumped from 8,000,000 to 20,000,0000 during the last 13 years with a steady increase in speed, McIntyre cited the lessons of industry as to the effect on accidents of even moderate indulgence in intoxicants.

A slowing of reaction time and inability to judge distance are the chief motoring liabilities of drinking, he said.

First Lady to Spurn Cocktail with Repeal

DEL MONTE, Cal., Dec. 5.—(INS.)—The First Lady of the land will not celebrate repeal of prohibition with a cocktail. This was disclosed here today in a letter received from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt by officials of the National Association for the Advancement of the Fine Art of Drinking.

While expressing sympathy with aims of the association, Mrs. Roosevelt declared that she was "personally a dry and did not drink any cocktail or punch that contained alcohol."

What's to Become Of 3,764 Serving Liquor Terms?

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(INS.)—There are 3,764 persons serving sentences in federal prisons for violating the prohibition law which becomes void today. The total number of federal prisoners is 13,885.

When 3.2 per cent beer was legalized President Roosevelt instructed Attorney General Cummings to check the records of those prisoners convicted solely on violating beer regulations with a view toward releasing them. However, the records in most cases did not separate beer from liquor law violations.

PITTSBURGHERS SET TO HAIL BARLEYCORN

by the restaurants and hotels, for one thing. For another, they offer their customers a bar over which to drink.

Status of the drug stores is unchanged by repeal. Druggists may continue to sell prescription whisky—and "scrips" are not too difficult to get. Drug store prices by the bottle were approximately the same as those announced by the hotels and restaurants.

These prices begin at $1.50 per pint and climb upward. For the best drug store whisky, $7.50 a quart.

QUARTER A DRINK

In hotels and restaurants you'll be able to buy a drink of what, in the old days, would have been bar whisky at best, for as low as 25 cents. For better grades of whisky, and for mixed drinks, the prices shoot to as high as 40 cents.

These are approximately the same prices which have been prevailing for the last six months in speakeasies.

The bigger speakeasies have shown no indication of retiring from the racket. Fortified behind charters, they are listed, in the eyes of the commonwealth, as clubs. As such they are allowed bars.

More than one Pittsburgher was interested not in consuming whisky, but in getting a job in any one of the 20 or more state stores which will dispense the package stuff after January 1.

While the applications were pouring in, Gov. Pinchot was having his troubles trying to find a third man to join Dean A. Marshall Thompson, of Pittsburgh, and former Judge Robert S. Gawthrop as members of the Liquor Control Board. The Governor yesterday made another plea to Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., the millionaire oil man of Butler, to accept the position. Phillips, who was on a launch at sea last night, was not expected to return to Butler before Wednesday.

Regarded as a possible gubernatorial candidate next year, he has persisted in his refusal to accept the job.

However, if they were without the services of a third colleague, Dean Thompson and Judge Gawthrop had a staff of 125 persons prepared to handle today's rush.

Among those they have already licensed is Pittsburgh's exclusive Duquesne Club.

SPURNS LICENSE

But to the equally exclusive society-minded Twentieth Century Club, no license has been granted because none has been asked. And Mrs. Charles S. Shoemaker, president, said today that the matter would be discussed at a board meeting Friday. Mrs. Shoemaker doubts that the club will arrange even for a wine cellar.

And certainly there will be nothing served at the club tonight, when the Stage and Play Society presents James W. Macfarlane's play "Love and Liverwurst," although the last named commodity is an excellent companion to beer.

However, after the performance Author Macfarlane will have a repeal party in his studio.

None of today's excitement reflected about the person of Roy A. MacGregor, of Crafton, although that gentleman is vitally interested in repeal. He yesterday was named an investigator of liquor-store sites in Allegheny County. And his judgment likely will prevail as to where you'll buy package stuff after January 1.

MacGregor's appointment might be credited to Senator Frank J. Harris. The Crafton man is president of the Masonic Clubs of the United States and was Senator Harris' last campaign manager. He also is sales representative for the Lakewood Engineering Company, of Cleveland. He has lived in Crafton for 15 years.

Hairdressers to Join In Greeting Repeal

The Pittsburgh Hairdressers Association will give a "victory" dance at Hotel William Penn tomorrow night. A triple celebration, the event will mark the passing of prohibition, the selection of Pittsburgh for the 1934 national convention of hairdressers and the passing of a new law making state board examinations for beauty operators compulsory.

Devere Allen, Editor, Talks at 'Y' Tonight

Devere Allen, editor of the "World Tomorrow" and former editor of "The Nation," will speak at the Y. M. and W. H. A., Bellefield avenue, tonight. In his nation-wide tour, Mr. Allen will speak at Beaver Falls tomorrow and Jeannette Thursday.

DRYS DEFEATED IN COURT FIGHT ON REPEAL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The effort to prevent issuance of the proclamation announcing ratification of the prohibition repeal amendment was rejected today by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The unsuccessful court action was brought by Canon William Sheafe Chase, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and George S. Duncan, of this city, representing the International Reform Federation. They contended the amendment had been illegally ratified in several of the states.

Their effort to retain national prohibition a failure, spokesmen for the principal dry organizations said today the struggle against liquor would be carried back to the states.

PLANS VAGUE

On the other hand, the future of the groups which strove for repeal was uncertain—now that repeal is here. Several have already disbanded.

Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said the directors of the association would decide what to do at a dinner in New York tonight.

An official of the Crusaders said it ceased to function nationally several months ago.

Although final determination of future Anti-Saloon League policies awaits a meeting of the organization's directors early in January, the league is now carrying out a five-point program.

This includes a campaign "to hold or regain state and local prohibition laws in order to extend dry territory to the maximum and reduce wet territory to the minimum."

M'BRIDE ABSENT

F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the league, was absent from Washington. Other officials said it would be the league's policy to demand that voters of political subdivisions in wet states have a right to exclude liquor no matter what control system the states adopted.

The league will not join with the wets in the formation of any liquor control policy in the states. McBride said recently that "those who supported repeal are both entitled to and obligated to assume full responsibility for handling the liquor traffic."

W. VA. PERMITS RUM IMPORTS

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Importation of liquor by an individual for his personal use was approved today by Attorney General Holt as the prohibition era neared an end in states bordering West Virginia.

The Attorney General's ruling places no restriction on the amount of liquor that may be brought in by an individual. He said, however, that it was "highly expedient" that the Legislature act promptly to pass legislation to conform with the new liquor situation and referred to the prohibition limit of one quart on imports. The Attorney General wrote:

"The bootlegging of bonded liquor is no more legal than the bootlegging of moonshine liquor.

"It will further be noted that our present prohibition laws are not designed to cope with the situations presented by possible legal sale of intoxicating liquors in some of our neighboring states."

M'LEAN SLATED FOR RUM POST

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Robert McLean, president of the Bulletin Publishing Company, Philadelphia, today had been offered a position as the third member of the State Liquor Control Board, according to persons close to Gov. Gifford Pinchot and legislative leaders.

McLean, a wet, is reported to have been offered the position originally given to Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., Butler oil man, who refuses to take office although his nomination for a two-year period has been confirmed by the Senate.

Before a substitute member can be named, Phillips must tender his official resignation. Robert S. Gawthrop, West Chester, and A. Marshall Thompson, Pittsburgh, other liquor "czars" confirmed, have assumed their duties.

Keep Out of Rum's Way, Mrs. Boole Tells Women

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—A solemn warning to women to keep off the streets tonight, when legal liquor puts in a return engagement after 14 years, was sounded today by Mrs. Ella Boole, head of the world Woman's Christian Temperance Union, most ardent of the women prohibitionists.

Said the twentieth century's Carrie Nation:

"They are evidently getting ready for some trouble. I have made no plans to go out. I think we all want to keep off the streets tonight."

Mrs. Boole, you see, never thought the Eighteenth Amendment was a failure. It "helped a great deal," she said.

Her fears for a dangerously wet night were dismissed with dignity by Mrs. Cortlandt Nicoll, first vice chairman of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, the outfit that out-reformed the reforming W. C. T. U.

Said Mrs. Nicoll:

"This day ought to be taken seriously. It ought to be observed as a quiet triumph—and it will be. It is the day of the restoration to the American people of liberties guaranteed them under the Constitution, which were taken away."

Dry or Damp, We're Still on Stagger Plan

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Casey Jones is at the throttle of a California wine train.

Utah presses the button that unbuttons the Constitution.

President Roosevelt will take the tax off gasoline and put it on whisky. No matter where the tax is, it is still dangerous to strike a match near it.

Authorities are confused over repeal laws. The only legal way is to dive into a snowbank and wait for a St. Bernard dog with a keg on his back.

There is no difference between repeal and prohibition. It's still the stagger plan.

All we ask is a fair trial. If we fail them the trial wasn't fair.

Detroit Stays 'Dry,' Waits State Repeal

DETROIT, Dec. 5.—(Universal.)—Much of the country may be sopping wet tonight, tomorrow, but to Detroiters it will be just another day under prohibition—officially.

The Governor, prosecuting attorneys and police commissioners are of one mind about enforcing the law, but they must work without the aid of the federal government. The dry law in Michigan will be in force (as much as it ever was) until it is repealed by the State Legislature—maybe today or Wednesday.

Pretty Surroundings Not Secret of Success

Must we dress "keen" and live "classy," before we can have any friends?

Jeanette thinks we must. Many another unhappy working girl agrees with her. So, night after night, they sit "cooped up" in a place they hate, counting the stains on the paper, the spots on the floor—bitterly blaming Dad and Mom, or Fate, for their misery.

But who's really to blame? Listen, while we tell little, lonely Jenny.

Dear Miss Robinson:

I am so unhappy. I don't know what to do. My people are dead, and I work for my living and haven't any home. I long for fun and friends, like any other girl.

But the trouble is, I have no clothes, and I live in a little attic room, with stained wallpaper, shabby furniture, and a rug that saw its best day years ago.

For that reason, I know few people. Other girls in the place where I work are not unfriendly, but I just can't go out with them, or invite them to visit me. I know that they would make fun of where I live, and I would be ashamed to go out anywhere with them, in the clothes I have.

IS DISCOURAGED

Why do I get such a bad break? I see other people happy, and laughing, and going places. I see other people—other girls—inviting folks to their pretty homes. And here I sit, evening after evening, longing to go places or invite someone in for the evening, too, but knowing that I can't.

I'm getting more and more bitter about it all. I work hard. I don't see why I have to be so unhappy. Sometimes I think I will just end it all. I can't stand this loneliness. Why can't I have a chance, like everyone else? Must I always go on this way? JEANETTE.

Must you "go on this way?"

That's up to you, youngster.

Yes, I know; you think you're trapped by ugly walls, those shabby clothes, those pinched wages. And far be it from me to say that they're not a handicap!

For I've known them myself, little girl—and I know what dreariness like that can do to even the bravest spirit.

But that attic room can't really spoil your life unless you let it, Jeanette. And the trap which is breaking your heart isn't formed of four walls—but of your own discouragement, and resentment, and self-pity.

GO AFTER FRIENDS

That's hard to take, isn't it? But it's true. Pretty surroundings, smart clothes—they help a lot. But they're not the secret of success. Nor is the lack of them the secret of failure.

Your own attitude toward life—that is what makes or breaks you. And that would be just as true if you were the richest or the most beautiful girl on earth.

You yourself—not the room you live in or the clothes you wear—make the "breaks," be they good or bad.

So stop sitting like a bump on a log, blaming the world for giving you a bum break. If you want a better one, go after it! If you want friends, be one.

Hundreds of other lonely girls are hungry for the comradeship you could give. Scores of wealthier girls would envy the gypsy fun you might have in your attic room.

If you want their love, it's waiting for you.

If you want fun, you can have it.

But it won't come to you, youngster. You must, like all the rest of us, forget your self-pity, park your peeve, put your pride in your pocket—and go after it!

Can you? Will you? Sure you can—and will! Then, let's get going, Jenny girl!

I'M GOIN' TO BE A STREET-CAR CONDUCTOR WHEN I GROW UP!
THE MOST REMARKABLE FACT IN THE CHILDHOOD OF MOST OF THE WORLD'S FAMOUS MEN IS THAT NO ONE SUSPECTED THEIR TALENTS THEN FAY-KING

By FAY KING

The reason there are few child prodigies is not because there are few gifted children but because, fortunately, there are few parents who will drive a talented child beyond his years.

Any clever child can be drilled and driven to a development beyond his years, and so become remarkable for a little while.

But, happily, no matter what pride and high hopes parents have for their children, they have not the heart to set the little ones to long, weary, hours of study and practice. Good parents know that the only success for children is just to grow, play and be loved.

A child prodigy always impresses one less as a gifted child, and more as the horrible example of over ambitious parents.

Avis Arlen Tries Trickery to Get Her Favorite Gown

Lillian made a dash for the dress boxes as Helena Brixton told us that "that cat of an Avis nearly managed to get her gown away from me." Helena watched Lillian with amused eyes as she cut the strings and opened the boxes.

"Do you know me so little?" she asked, "as to think that the girl got away with anything? I said she 'nearly managed'—not that she succeeded.

"Oh! I'm not saying she wouldn't have done any little thing she could to ruin 'em," Helena said, "but I never took my eyes off her all the time she was with me, and the women at the shop guarded the gowns until they were packed in their boxes. Then I took Carolyn and Avis out for a bite of supper, telling Avis, as you had instructed, that there was extra work upon her gown, but that she could get it early tomorrow morning.

"I had told the women that when she should come for it, they should pretend that a mistake had been made, and that they had sent the gown out by Sam who, incidentally, joined us at the station after Avis left us. But just listen to this, if you want to hear of 'tricks that are vain'!"

"We're all ears," Lillian said, "but let me warn you—nothing that cockroach Avis could do would surprise me."

AVIS UNSUCCESSFUL

"Don't slur a poor little bug," Helena said viciously, "but listen carefully! We went to a restaurant near the shop, and after the first course Avis excused herself to go and telephone her mother. The telephone booth was around the corner from where we were sitting, and I did not notice at first how long she was staying away. Finally I had a hunch and went to the telephone booth, finding no one there. I promptly called the dressmaking shop and asked the woman if Miss Arlen had come there in the last few minutes.

"'Oh! I am so glad you called,' Mrs. Smithers said. 'We are in such a quandry. You gave us such strict orders not to deliver those gowns to anyone but yourself, but Miss Arlen is downstairs now, saying that you have found there is no room in your car trunk for both boxes, and that you have asked her to take her gown with her.'

"I nearly had hysterics, until they convinced me that the box was still safe in their workroom. Then I told them not to say that I had telephoned, but to insist that they could deliver nothing except to me personally."

"One for little Avis," Lillian said appreciatively. "What did she say when she got back? Did you let her know you were on?"

"No, I'm saving that little pleasure," Helena said viciously. "I'll hand it to her later, never fear. I'm not going to let her get away with that little stunt thinking she fooled me.

ADMIRES GOWNS

"But you should have seen her coming back into the restaurant and heard her plausible story of being unable to get her number from the restaurant telephones, because of some trouble on the lines, and having to walk blocks before being able to get another telephone. And you should have seen me, smiling at her and sympathizing with her, when all the time I would have given my left ear to have been able to take her over my knee right then and there and given her one of the spankings she should have had before she was 10."

Lillian and I rose as one woman, and, walking over to Helena, proffered her our hands.

"We are of one blood—you and we," Lillian paraphrased. "But you've come through nobly. The gowns are perfect, and aren't they dreams of beauty?"

"I haven't had a chance to look at them properly yet," I told her, and then we gazed at the pretty things with the admiration all women feel for the fripperies connected with weddings.

"Where are you going to keep them until time for the girls to dress for the wedding?" Helena asked.

"Right in your closet, dearest," Lillian told her "There's a key on that door, and I should advise you to wear it around your neck.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bread-and-Butter Note

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have just returned from a business trip. We were entertained by his employer and his employer's wife. I want to write a note to the wife thanking her for the many things she did to make our visit in her city so pleasant.

Won't you tell me how to word such a note? They are people of culture and refinement and know the correct thing to do and say at all times. So much depends on this note, and I do want them to like me! A.

When you write this important note (and I realize how important it is to you), keep in mind that it is an excellent plan to thank first for the hospitality in general, and then chat informally about certain definite things that you know your hosts planned especially for your happiness. Think what, under similar circumstances, you would like to be thanked for.

Your note might, in a general way, begin something like this:

Dear Mrs. Waters:

Your goodness and kindness and hospitality to Tom and me were so perfect that I wish that I could find just the perfect words to thank you for them. Tom and I had a gloriously happy time with you and Mr. Waters, a memory-making time, and ever since we came home, we have talked over together every delightful hour we had with you, in your home, with your friends, and at the charming parties that you planned for us. You and Mr. Waters are perfect hosts!

Then you would add your appreciation of the definite parties or the definite things that were planned for your entertainment. Hosts, too, remember, like to know if we liked their friends, and it is pleasant to thank them for this "sharing" of their friends. But don't accent too much the "out of the home" entertainment . . . thank them most of all for the enjoyable hours spent with them getting to know them in their home.

Take Back Seat

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When riding in our automobile (sedan) with my husband and a girl friend, what seat should I take? Should I ride alongside my husband, who does the driving, or sit in the rear seat with my girl friend?

2—Is it correct for me to use an ecru lace tablecloth with matching napkins of linen when serving dinner for four at six o'clock in the evening. B.

1—Sit in the rear seat with your friend. It is definitely ungracious for a hostess to sit in the front seat with her husband, leaving the guest to sit alone in the rear seat.

2—Yes. Ecru lace tablecloths and napkins are very effective, and very popular.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Lead When Partner Doubles

When the partner of the leader has doubled a game contract, having previously taken no part in the auction, the choice of the correct lead is somewhat of a problem. Ordinarily if the contract is no-trump the leader cannot be expected to have a satisfactory suit of his own to lead which will help the doubler to defeat the contract. Even with a long and fairly solid suit the probabilities are that the lead of that suit will prove unsatisfactory as it may remove an entry card from the partner's hand and thus actually advance the game of the opponents. The correct lead must be sought for below the surface—in inferences drawn from the bidding. With the aid of such inferences, the leader can usually decide accurately the lead that should be made.

In a recent Duplicate game I saw a contract made which should have been defeated if the leader had drawn the correct inferences from the opposing bid and his partner's Double. The hand was:

North, Dealer.

	♠ A Q 7 4 3 ♡ A 10 3 2 ◇ 7 2 ♣ 6 5
♠ 9 5 2 ♡ 9 ◇ Q J 10 6 3 ♣ 7 4 3 2	West North East South	♠ K J 10 6 ♡ J 8 7 6 5 ◇ K ♣ K Q 9
	♠ 8 ♡ K Q 4 ◇ A 9 8 5 4 ♣ A J 10 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Double	Redouble	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's bid of one notrump is not in accordance with any system. With a five-card diamond suit, a four-card club suit and a hand as strong as he holds, the bid of two diamonds unquestionably is preferable.

The Double, it must be admitted, is a fairly close one—unquestionably entirely unjustifiable in rubber play, but reasonable enough in Duplicate.

The lead is fairly obvious. It is apparent that East holds strength in hearts or spades or both, and that, as a first measure of attack, he desires a lead of one of these suits by his partner. Further analysis should disclose to West that the lead must be a spade. In the first place, South made a minimum response to the Opening bid of one spade, but when his partner bid two hearts he immediately bid three notrump. In the second place, if a heart is led, West can never lead another. Hence he can be of little benefit to his partner in establishing tricks in that suit. Because he has three spades and one heart, the correct Opening lead on the basis of the opposing bidding and his partner's Penalty Double is the highest spade—namely, the nine-spot. Against this lead, with perfect play, South cannot make his contract. Only by brilliant and accurate play, in fact, can he hold the penalty to one trick.

Instead of making this correct lead West chose to open the top of his diamond tenace. East was forced to play the King, and South permitted him to hold the trick. East now was in difficulties for a lead. He finally led the club King. South won and put West in the lead again with the return of a diamond. Even at this point the position of the defense was not hopeless, but West, still under the influence of some mental lapse, returned a club, and East, at the end, was permitted to cash a heart trick and then forced to lead up to Dummy's tenace in spades, permitting the fulfillment of the ambitious contract.

Today's Question

If the Opening Hand had bid one diamond, what do you bid, holding:

♠ A Q J 7 ♡ K 9 7 5 ◇ 6 3 ♣ 4 3 2

Answer: One spade. When only one-odd is necessary to overcall an opponent's bid, you may, not vulnerable, bid on a four-card biddable suit with about 4 playing-tricks (including 1½ to 2 honor-tricks).

Why did they put VITAMIN A in SMITH BROTHERS Cough Syrup?
Doctors have found that it leads to FASTER COLD and COUGH RECOVERY and fewer re-infections
Primary VITAMIN A has been added to Smith Brothers Cough Syrup. This "Anti-Infective" vitamin is Nature's own weapon for fighting coughs, colds... Now Smith Brothers Cough Syrup not only gives fast cough relief. Its Primary Vitamin A aids Nature in DRIVING the cough and cold out of the system faster. And it raises the resistance against re-infection. Smith Brothers is the ONLY cough syrup containing Primary Vitamin A. Costs only 35¢.

"I am so happy—
the last pimple is gone"

—because pimples tend to thrive when normal resistance is lacking, your first thought should be to build up your blood structure... the way to do this is by increasing the red-blood-cells and their hemoglobin content... this will permit a greater oxygen intake—from the lungs—into the blood and tissues—including the skin... nourishment will be better converted into energy and tissue repair... body cells, which fight against micro-organisms (pimple germs) will be strengthened.

Then why not try S.S.S.—the proven tonic for decades? Proved effective by extensive scientific research and by millions of happy users. You, too, may have a clear skin. Get S.S.S. at any drug store. The big 20 oz. size is more economical and is good for a two weeks' treatment.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Paralysis Not a Hopeless Affliction

"Will he be paralyzed for life?" This is an eager question often asked the doctor.

Dr. Copeland

Paralysis of a muscle or limb is an alarming condition. But it is not always a permanent defect.

Paralysis may occur after an injury where important muscles are torn apart. It may be the result of an infectious disease, such as infantile paralysis. In aged persons it is commonly associated with brain hemorrhage and is more commonly known as "a stroke" or "apoplexy."

In apoplexy the paralysis is due to a hemorrhage or rupture of some of the blood vessels of the brain. The stroke may result from high blood pressure or hardening of the arteries. Occasionally, it is associated with a tumor, abscess or other disturbance of the brain.

When paralysis occurs on one side of the body it is called "hemiplegia." Hemiplegia usually involves the entire half of the body, as one side of the face, one arm, half of the trunk and one leg. If the legs and trunk are involved the paralysis is spoken of as "paraplegia." "Monoplegia" is a paralysis of a single extremity, as a leg or arm.

Not so long ago paralysis was accepted as a permanent defect. Little hope could be offered to the victim of this affliction. Fortunately, modern science no longer takes this hopeless attitude. Since the paralysis is usually due to some circulatory change, improvement in the underlying disease leads to improvement of the paralysis.

The treatment is different when the paralysis is the result of some infection, such as infantile paralysis. Here, every effort must be made to strengthen the afflicted muscles and nerves. No one will deny that tremendous strides have been made in this field.

Many victims of this dreaded affliction have been saved from complete and permanent paralysis by modern methods of treatment. In certain cases surgery has been resorted to and the results have been more than gratifying. It is hoped that within a short time the actual cause of this dread disease will be discovered and proper steps taken for the prevention of the disease.

Other forms of paralysis are now successfully treated by special baths, a method of treatment called "hydrotherapy." In addition, electrical treatments, lamp treatments, massage and supervised exercises, have helped overcome many cases of paralysis.

Paralysis should never be neglected. Do not consider it as hopeless. Make every effort to determine the underlying cause. Then resort to the necessary treatment essential to recovery and cure. Bear in mind that if paralysis is neglected it is likely to become worse and lead to further loss of function.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now

(It's fun to be fooled).

That no matter what temperature it is—a cucumber is usually one degree cooler. Hence the phrase "Cool as a cucumber."

That King George of England has a dragon tattooed on his back. The authority for that crack is an old British magazine. I read it.

That Miami Beach is the only incorporated city in the land without a cemetery. (No, they don't let their dead walk around).

That you can get a full course dinner there for 15 cents!

That the easily fatigued will profit by this one. A teaspoonful of honey daily will tilt your energy 5 to 10 points!

That Will Rogers never kissed a girl (or a boy, for that matter) on the screen. (He's too shy).

That 80 million people in the U. S. go to the movies every week. Twenty-two million are minors—11 million being under 13.

That P. T. Barnum, who coined the phrase: "There's a sucker born every minute" was himself "taken" in Colorado—when they sold him a suburb that didn't jell. (It still bears his name, tho.)

That the Seminole Indians in Florida are considered legally dead by the Gov't. The Sems refused to surrender when other tribes did—and they never made a treaty. To this day they spurn relief from the U. S., preferring to make their own way in the Everglades.

That according to a date established by Parliament at one time, Adam and Eve were born on Oct. 28th—4004 B. C.

That British censorship bans the portrayal of the last two Monarchs (Victoria and Eddie) on the stage. (Okay on the screen, though).

That all snails aren't slow. Those in the Channel Isles travel at the rate of six yards per minute.

That in Cuba where men work silently (such as wrapping cigars, etc.) a "lector" (lecturer) keeps them amused by reading aloud. He is perched on a high stool in front of them—and reads magazines from "kiver to kiver" or books or newspapers. (The listeners pay him daily—2 cents each).

That one dog in England has made his master rich. "Mick, the Miller" is England's champion racing greyhound. He has won over £60,000 in prize money and plays the lead in an English film based on dog racing.

That the name of the Chief of Police in Trenton, Mich., is Crooks.

That El Brendel isn't so much a big Swede as he is an American. He was educated at the University of Wisconsin.

That people worry a great deal about hauling down the flag at sunset, yet in the national anthem, written in 1814, appears the lyric: "gave proof thru the night that the flag was stil there!"

That a person can be in West Texas and East Texas at the same time. A town there named West is in the Eastern part of the State, ehhhhh!

That the average span of life today is 58 years—whereas 100 years ago you were lucky if you made 33.

That ten million labels will have to be printed annually for beer bottles alone—meaning so many more jobs for which none of us, however, can thank either of the Carolinas.

That the upkeep cost for the League of Nations last year was $6,750,000—the most expensive waste of taxes, yet!

That very few artists can paint the human hand correctly.

That in Shanghai you may see a condemned man executed for an admission tariff of only 2 cents in Chinese money.

That the new radio cabs are so arranged that you cannot tune them on unless the flag on the meter is down. The cabbies, however, got around that. They ground it by sticking a pin in the wire!

That if you live to be 90, you can't get appendicitis.

That if you're in an Alabama prison and you become eligible for parole you must advertise your application for freedom by inserting an ad in a newspaper published in that county. The ad costs $8—if you haven't the three bucks—that's too bad. (Some civilized law that.)

That they aren't afraid of the B. B. W. in Italy or Austria where wolf-flesh, roasted or grilled, is a delicacy. (Fuey!)

That men are forbidden to work in the village of Tenganan, Bali (Dutch East Indies). If they do and they're caught—the penalty is a public thrashing to be administered by the women!

That you may buy a Military Medal, a coveted British war decoration for as low as a dollar. A Distinguished Conduct Medal costs $4; the Distinguished Service Order, a proud distinction given only to British Officers, can be had for a mere ten smackers. (What P. G.?)

That 5,440 human beings are born, 4,630 die and 2,400 marry in this world every hour. (Oh, somebody told me—don't be like that!)

That women acrobats and ballet dancers seldom have children.

And that Llanfairpwllgwyngyllogerychwyrndrobwllllandysylliogogch—a word of over 50 letters is the name of a town in North Wales, Great Britain. Translated it means: "Church of St. Mary, in a hollow of white hazel, near to a rapid whirlpool, and to the St. Tysioli's church, near a red cave."

When the railroad train arrives there, the conductor, they say, calls out: "If there is anybody here for there—this is it!"

Rare Violin Offered In Trade for Farm

SEATTLE, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—W. D. Cleming, a farmer at King's Mountain, N. C., wants to settle in Washington or Oregon.

He writes that all he has to offer in exchange for a farm is a genuine Stainer violin, made in the eighteenth century. In normal times, he says, it would be worth $1,400.

'Alice in Wonderland' Is Fun With Eva Le Gallienne As White Queen

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Whether the very learned and profound author of "Alice in Wonderland" knew he was furnishing the raw material for a first-class Christmas pantomime, or was just trying to show how absurd logic and arithmetic could be, Eva Le Gallienne has discovered the possibilities of the classic nonsense book and turned it into a gorgeous entertainment for infant, adolescent, adult and the superannuated. To do this she has ransacked the entire world to put behind the footlights—she has taken the moving scenery from "Parsifal," marionettes from Italy, masks from Aristophanes, the spirit of W. S. Gilbert to animate the entire thing—and, best of all, she has laid no unconsecrated hands upon the text. She may have taken some verses of Lewis Carroll's that were not in "Alice" or its sequel, but who should object, since Wordsworth is dead whom those verses parodied.

Mr. Seibel

The result of all this labor is a glorious entertainment at the Nixon, which will be specially appreciated by babes, octogenarians and the ages between.

What might have happened had some up-to-date producer brought the thing up-to-date is terrible to contemplate. Miss Le Gallienne has held to the immortal text, included all the exquisitely absurd lyrics, and created the world of fancy, whimsy and topsy-turviness that required a Wagenbuehne, a picture machine, a puppet stage, an augmented orchestra and a large cast, including a live cat and a real pig, to translate into reality.

BIG JOB FOR ALICE

Josephine Hutchinson has a mighty big job as Alice. It may not be as heavy a part as Hamlet, but it is almost as long. Since the day of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" there has hardly been a juvenile role so exacting. Miss Hutchinson creates a perfect illusion of girlish perplexity, as she passes through one adventure to another. The youngsters in the audience all believed in her—but so did the oldsters.

Eva Le Gallienne herself has only three scenes as the White Chess Queen, but she put a rich abundance of humor and vivacity into those scenes. Leona Roberts as the Red Queen made an excellent foil to this, and the fantasy ended in a riot of hilarity.

Most of the people in the very large cast made the utmost of their opportunities. Howard da Silva as the White Knight must have drawn inspiration from "Don Quixote." Walter Beck gave Humpty-Dumpty in a sort of Saint-Saens mood. Landon Herrick showed much method as the Mad Hatter, and a rare bit of serious zoology in the humbler walks of life was supplied by Sayre Crawley as the Caterpillar.

Nor should William S. Phillips and Staats Cotsworth be forgotten, who as Tweedledum and Tweedledee showed distinguished but indistinguishable musical feeling.

WALRUS AND CARPENTER

It was a stroke of genius to put the mournful ballad of the Walrus and Carpenter on as a marionette interlude. The trial at the court of the King and Queen of Hearts was another high spot. The Cheshire Cat turned out very amusing. There is also a horse of truly comical anatomy.

Ramon Rufano deserves high honors for his construction of the masks and puppets. Richard Addinsell has fitted appropriate music to the scenes. The designs after Sir John Tenniel were excellently adapted by Irene Sharaff.

It was altogether a marvelous realization of the classic juvenile that has been the joy of wise men for three quarters of a century.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Josephine Hutchinson, who plays the title role in the Eva Le Gallienne production of "Alice In Wonderland" in the Nixon, will find a rival Alice in town Wednesday—the Alice of the movie version of the Lewis Carroll classic of childhood. Charlotte Henry is the movie Alice, and she will spend tomorrow in Pittsburgh as the guest of the local branch of Paramount, producer of the picture. At 12:30 o'clock she will be a guest of honor at a luncheon to be given in the Variety Club. Miss Henry was selected for her part from among a large number of young Hollywood actresses, the tests eventually eliminating all except two, Miss Henry and one other girl. Perhaps the stage and screen Alices may meet here.

* * *

Willie and Eugene Howard, star comedians of the new Ziegfeld "Follies," coming to the Nixon next week, have had only occasional seperations in their 25 years on the stage. Their first engagement with the late Florenz Ziegfeld was in "The Little Duchess." For many years they were prominent in the reviews of the New York Winter Garden. They were seen here frequently in those productions as well as in vaudeville. The seat sale for the "Follies" will open Thursday.

'Spanky' Tot is Suspended In Whooping Cough War

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 5.—Echoes of the Baby Leroy whooping cough scare are reverberating again in Hollywood.

The Board of Education stirred them up when they sent out letters suspending "Spanky" McFarland's acting permit for 90 days. The board charges lack of cooperation, and hints that "Spanky" was known to have whooping cough when he did the last day's work on "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," and exposed Baby Leroy to the disease.

All of which might be a small matter if it weren't for two things.

And the Hal Roach studio, where the 5-year-old star is under contract, faces the loss of his services for three months.

Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McFarland, "Spanky's" parents, come in for extra grief as their second child is starting to whoop it up."

* * *

Screen newcomers always pull funny boners, but they are awarding the palm to Hal Leroy, youthful Broadway dancer, who has come out to Warner Brothers to play the title role in "Harold Teen."

The young New Yorker showed up on the "Heat Lightning" set in makeup. He stood around so long and appeared so uncomfortable that Director Mervyn Leroy finally came up and spoke to him.

"Waiting for anybody?" he asked.

The dancer looked startled.

"Isn't this my set!" he exclaimed. "I saw a sign on the door saying 'Leroy Company.'"

* * *

Johnny had chartered a plane to fly to the "Laughing Boy" location and drop in on Lupe for Thanksgiving dinner.

But, in the meantime, Director W. S. Van Dyke unexpectedly finished his scenes in Arizona and told the company to entrain for Hollywood.

Fifteen minutes before Johnny was to leave home to catch his plane, Lupe called the house on long-distance to tell the chauffeur to meet her in Pasadena.

* * *

George Raft can hardly wait for next March. Paramount promises him a three months' leave of absence after he finishes "Nick the Greek," and the star, accompanied by the faithful Mack Gray, otherwise known as "The Killer," will head for New York and Europe. The Raft popularity is great across the water, where Georgie was no stranger even before he took up acting for the movies. It was during an 18-week dancing engagement in a London night club that the sleek-haired actor taught the Prince of Wales a new step and was presented with a wrist watch by the heir to Britain's throne.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Odds and Ends.

AT LEAST once in every year, I can depend upon a telephone call from Mr. Ted Husing, the broadcasting genius. The call generally arrives shortly before the Army-Notre Dame football game, and Ted always asks me to go on the air for him between the halves.

He did not fail me this year. The telephone rang loud and long, as I knew immediately that it was Husing.

"Mark," he asserted, "the big game is only a few days away. I've got your ticket in my box and you go on the air as soon as the first half is over. I'll send ——"

I interrupted him at this point on the acknowledged theory that if you don't interrupt a Husing, the conversation can go on until death do us part.

"Just a minute, old boy," I said. "I don't think I'm going to do it this year, Ted. I'm too nervous these days."

And I was telling the truth, rare as it might seem. I don't mind hitting the air on small stations. As a matter of fact, I rather like it. But when it comes to the Columbia Broadcasting System and all that it implies, the microphone frightens me beyond words.

I have to work for two days preparing my stuff, and I must be careful of each word. The night before the broadcast I can't sleep. Just before they give me the microphone, my stomach turns more revolutions than they have in Cuba. And all for what?

"But you can't turn me down, Mark," Ted went on. "The situation demands your presence. The vast army of listeners-in will rise in revolt unless your honeyed words fall upon their ears."

He went on and on in a similar vein. Before I knew it, he had created a picture of the President, himself, crying bitterly because I was not on the air. Mr. Husing can certainly do strange tricks with words.

But I was firm in my refusal.

"It's grand of you to say all those things, Ted," I told him honestly, "but I can't see my way clear to do it. Next year, maybe. But not now."

Silence for a moment. And then came Mr. Husing's final words, as clear as a bell.

"Okay, Mark. If that's the way you feel about it, it's okay with me. I'll get somebody else. All I wanted you for, you know, was to fill in for a couple of minutes so that I could fix my score sheet for the second half!" . . .

"THEY'RE still talking," writes Jay C. Bumberg, "about that over-anxious employer who signed two NRA codes, and now his employes are working eighty hours! He would have signed more, but for the fact that he gets tired after marking two 'X's'!" . . .

A GROUP of us were discussing the outcome of the recent election. On man yawned, and openly confessed that he had never voted in his life.

This infuriated the man on his right. Keenly interested in politics, he insisted that the vote is a sacred thing. He pounded the table and told the non-voter he should be ashamed of himself.

"Yeah?" returned the first man. "Well, I don't think it's that important. Are you gonna sit there and tell me that you have voted each election all your life?"

The serious-minded gentleman glared at him.

"I should say I have," he replied angrily. "I believe it is a man's sacred duty to cast a ballot. As a matter of fact, I was so interested in politics that I voted three times before I was twenty-one!" . . .

RIDING to the office in a cab yesterday, I saw my driver grow violently excited when we passed another hack. He cursed the other driver in excellent fashion although there was no apparent reason for it. Slightly bewildered, I inquired about it.

"Why," explained my driver angrily, "that bum was 'ridin' the hat.' Things aren't tough enough without guys goin' around 'ridin' the hat'!"

I thought I was fairly well acquainted with our modern slang, but "riding the hat" was a new one on me. The explanation of the phrase is a pretty good commentary on modern conditions.

The New York cab driver today averages about $15 a week. Sometimes he takes in a bit more; often a few dollars less. Whenever a new cab appears on the street, the hackie tries to get one. For there is generally more money to be gathered in a new cab than in an old one.

With several of the companies, however it is necessary for a driver to take in a certain amount each day if he wants to hold his job. There are occasions when he simply can't make the grade. So he throws his hat in the back, puts on his meter, drives around empty—and pays the amount registered to the boss out of his own pocket.

So now you know what "riding the hat' means. I admit it doesn't mean much—but look at the space it fills!

DURING the opening of a particularly bad show a few nights ago, a number of us gathered on the sidewalk in front of the theater after the first act. We were discussing the amazing stupidity of the offering, and wondering how it ever came to be produced.

Out of a garage next door wandered a drunk. He was plenty stewed. And as he rolled up to our group he placed a finger to his lips.

WET CELEBRATION :-: Seth Parker's Farewell :-: ON RADIO

Hail Repeal In Special Programs

Pittsburghers will be brought to KDKA, WJAS and KQV microphones this afternoon, willy nilly, when Lyn Morrow and Ed Sprague, equipped with KDKA apparatus, hail passersby in front of the William Penn Hotel; and Jim Murray and Tommy Munnell, of WJAS and KQV, interrogate pedestrians at the Chamber of Commerce Building entrance and on Fifth avenue, inquiring, "What Do You Think of Repeal?"

The WJAS-KQV street broadcast will be heard at 3:30; KDKA at 4:45.

* * *

A cross-country repeal celebration will be heard over a CBS-WJAS network tonight from midnight until 1 a. m.

Listeners will hear the gayety of guests at night-life centers in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

Down to the Sea

Millions of friends of Seth Parker, who is said to have the world's largest radio following, will wish him bon voyage when he sets sail from Portland, Me., passes Portland Head Light, and rounds the twin lights on Cape Elizabeth, heading southward for high adventure on the high seas tonight at 10.

Natives of Jonesport, Bucksport and all the other ports along the Maine coast; the Governor, Legislature, Bodoin College authorities and thousands of well-wishers are gathered at Portland to bid Seth and his crew farewell on their cruise around the world.

The voyagers will be on the air at regular intervals during their first 13 weeks at sea.

* * *

David Ross, whose "Poet's Gold" readings were postponed a week ago, returns to the Columbia-WJAS network tonight at 9:15. He will be heard weekly with Howard Barlow's orchestra.

* * *

North Woods

"Cold Blood," a story of murder in the North Woods, is dramatized over NBC-KDKA tonight at 8, as the Crime Clue thriller of the week.

* * *

Paul Muni, character actor of stage and screen, is to be interviewed during the California Melodies program, heard over CBS-WJAS at 9:30.

Rising Radio Stars Mostly Feminine

By AIRCASTER

For some beclouded reason, the networks recently have had better luck in the matter of building up feminine artists than with men.

The process of making newcomers to the mike famous and popular is much more complicated and uncertain than in the heyday of Morton Downey, Kate Smith, Columbo and Crosby.

If we look backward a bit, we find that this is true also of child prodigies.

The little girls seem to have a much easier time of it than boys. There is a Mitzi Green, a Baby Rose Marie, a Mary Small for every male youngster who becomes outstanding.

In the adult field, the masculine build-ups have been practically at a standstill, while audience attention has been kindly awarded to Lulu McConnells, Vera Vans, Shirley Howards, and a dozen others.

* * *

Frances White

That is why, perhaps, the major chains have decided to take their chances with female neophytes rather than male.

Within the next fortnight, three new femme monickers will be on the lips of the eavesdroppers.

NBC is plotting an intensive build-up for Frances White, vaudeville star, who goes radio next Friday afternoon. CBS last night signed a new discovery, Joan Olsen, a husky-voiced dame, originally found by Ben Bernie, and tomorrow, on the CBS waves, another arrival will begin, in the person of the Chicago lass, Gina Vanna.

Roxy's Return

It has long been the dream of Roxy to add another hour to his weekly schedule, and the ambition will be realized December 11, when the Gang will have, in addition to its Sunday broadcast, the hour between 11 and 12 p. m. over NBC-KDKA every Monday.

* * *

Frank Novak and his orchestra will be featured on a new program, shortly. It will be based on the adventures of Raggedy Ann.

Abe Lyman's broadcast, with Frank Munn, heard Wednesdays, switches to Fridays at 9 p. m., beginning this week.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Just a few days ago we wrote a story about a heartbroken mother who had given her last photograph of her departed baby to a representative of an art studio to have an oil painting made from it. The representative had not returned and the mother was nearly frantic. Today we heard from the man who collected the photo. He said that he had been over to the woman's house several times, but she wasn't at home. However, he is getting the picture back to her immediately. (Thank you, Mrs. Stein and Betty Drinkwater).

That makes us all feel better, doesn't it?

P. L. Stewart—Many others have asked for information concerning jobs in the state liquor stores. The best advice I have to offer is to send immediately to the Department of Public Instruction, Harrisburg, for an application blank. You'll have to work fast, because the applications must be in Harrisburg by December 8 if you expect to be eligible for the civil service examinations.

Raymond Raab, Homestead, has an addition to the Globe Trotter's list of curiosities. His is a pet cat with seven toes on his feet, and five on his front paws.

Jean Kirchart—Come down to the Sun-Telegraph office at any time. Those stories you are looking for will be found in our newspaper files.

I want to acknowledge correspondence from B. Laslo, of Perryopolis; Mrs. Edna McCabe, Kennywood; Raymond W. Wirth, East Pittsburgh; Joseph Scripko, North Braddock, and Mrs. Pat Nicholson.

J. Q. Morrison writes that he has a copy of a Kingston Gazette, dated January 4, 1800. It is bordered in black and pictures the funeral cortege of George Washington.

P. S. We do not guarantee anything.

Now they are calling me Mazda-Walker.

Seibel Discusses Plays, Players

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, broadcasts the day's news over WCAE and WJAS at 12:15, 2:15 and 6:30 p. m.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, and attacks the seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion.

Is Your Water Heater A Lightning Change Artist?

THE gentleman is surprised, but we aren't. One could say, "Serves him right for having one of those hot-and-cold boilers when it's so easy to own a RUUD Automatic Water Heater." Boiler-heated water is always uncertain and quite likely to be freezing when you want it HOT. Even a meagre hot water supply requires a constant flame and that means GAS-WASTE. And in every case, you have RUST that pollutes your bath and is bad for your hair and complexion.

Compare this nuisance with RUUD Hot Water,—fresh, clear and sparkling . . . without rust . . . as pure as the cold water in the city reservoir . . . flowing instantly as you open the faucet . . . flowing hot as long as the faucet is open . . . burning no gas (except for the tiny pilot flame) when no hot water is drawn.

The place to COMPARE is our showroom. The time is now. The result is in your hands, for no obligation to buy will be attached to your visit.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT WITH A PAST AND A FUTURE

RUUD has a past,—and a great one. Forty-five years in one business, constantly striving for betterment of product,—and succeeding. Growing from one small factory to five large ones.

RUUD has a future,—in your home. Perfect hot water service, health, joy and convenience, day after day, year after year, for every member of your family.

Wood Top Hat Gift Sent to Roosevelt

SAN JOSE, Cal., Dec. 5.—Though the top hat made of California redwood as a gift for President Roosevelt by J. R. McGinnis, San Jose cabinet maker, will be a little hard and heavy for wear, it is guaranteed not to crush if sat upon.

McGinnis, in shipping it to the President, said he thought it might look nice on the mantel.

Many See Alice

More and more grown-ups have been slipping into the Nixon for the Children's Theater Saturday morning plays, and ever so many last night, without children as pretext, went to the Nixon to see "Alice in Wonderland."

And debs will probably be talking the jargon of the backwards world Alice discovered. It's catching.

Among the many fashionables I had a glimpse of in the huge crowd were Virginia Drake in a slim black dinner frock there with her mother, Mrs. J. Frank Drake. Mrs. Edward Vose Babcock wore a black velvet gown and Peggy Berger, a black velvet dress with brief capes over the shoulders.

"Alice" Popular

The dropped shoulder line so popular this year was exemplified in Helen Leovy's black crepe dinner dress. And the sleeves shirred near the top of the arm, were lined in vivid orange crepe. Her gown was cut high in front, and low in back. Her mother, Mrs. F. A. Leovy, was also in the audience.

Mrs. W. W. Blair, Jr., chose a dark red hammered satin gown. Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby, Mrs. H. Vaughan Blaxter, Mrs. D. M. Clemson, the Peter Westervelts, Mrs. George Pomeroy Bassett in poinsettia red crepe, and the Albert Lehmans, who are Miss Le Galliene's hosts.

Representing the debs were Margaret Phillips in a fur-trimmed black crepe dinner dress and Eleanor Cowdrey. Among those occupying boxes was Mrs. W. Harry Brown.

Only one of the McCahill twins was there—Marie—the first time I've ever seen one without the other. Mathilda Meyer was another I noted.

The Winchester Alumnae Association sponsored last night's performance as a benefit. Proceeds from the house, a sell-out, will be used to supply morning meals for needy school children.

Baltimore Cotillion

The daughter of a Sewickley family, who spends most of her time in the South with relatives, made her debut last night at the Bachellors' Cotillion, in Baltimore, as did one of Pittsburgh's popular younger set members. They are M. Lawrence Dunham, daughter of the Francis H. Dunhams, of Sewickley, and Hester Lyon, daughter of the Prescott Lyons, of Sewickley and Pittsburgh.

Twentieth Century Club Hears Haight Lecture On 'Little Duchies'

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

A country administered by a financial corporation for financial gain, a country governed by long distance telephone, a country that pays yearly tribute to France for protection from Spain, a country that admits smuggling is its chief industry—all these were fascinating bits included by Mark H. Haight in his informative and thoroughly delightful talk on "The Romance of the Little Duchies," given yesterday before the Twentieth Century Club.

In his splendidly delivered address and in motion and beautifully colored still pictures, Haight described these "little duchies"—Andorra, Liechtenstein, Monaca and Luxembourg, although only the last, he said, is really a duchy.

Andorra, settled by Charlemagne and first named Endor, was promised protection by him forever and ever. It still pays tribute to France; it would be annexed by Spain otherwise.

Haight spoke of it as "an Old Testament government," for it acknowledges neither king nor prince, but chooses its own officers.

Crime is rare and there are no prisons in Andorra, and smuggling of white oxen, mules and donkeys into France is an acknowledged industry, he said.

Haight recommended Liechtenstein as a place to go if one would forget troubles and worries and find peace. There is no poverty in the little principality, no army and no national debt and the mountain-stream generated electric current costs each consumer about $1 a year. The little country is governed over long distance telephone by its reigning prince in Vienna, and his is the only telephone in the country.

Luxembourg has the stormiest history of any country in the world, the armies of many peoples, even to khaki-clad Americans, having marched across it. On its every crag is a crumbling castle, slides of some of which ruins the lecturer showed. Monaca, the oldest kingdom in the world, conquered by Augustus Caesar and now known the world over as a pleasure resort, has something sinister and sordid about it, like a beautiful woman who has sold her virtue, Mr. Haight remarked.

THE LITTLE THAT LOOKS LIKE A LOT

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT'S an old crack, slightly revived by repeal, that most people with beer incomes have champagne appetites. Those that mourn over this adage probably are not very hot shoppers—if it is raiment that is suggested to their minds by the proverb. In spite of all the rich associations of the words "elegant," chic," "subtle," and "distinguished," gowns that can lay claim to any or all of them can be had for that blessed sum in the budgeteer's plans, "something around twenty dollars."

Stark years have just naturally subtracted a lot of extraneous trimmings from models that are frankly in the inexpensive class, and as even good materials are not dear, your low-priced frock has an even chance to be smart, though off-the-pile it may be.

* * *

THERE are some thousands of velvet frocks on the racks, for instance, cut so gracefully, trimmed so lightly, that any woman who can really wear clothes can slap one of them on, plus a string of dime shop crystals or pearls, a chichi little bonnet made of tulle and a clip, and rub shoulders with the dollar princesses with perfect aplomb.

The fact that her velvet may not last more than one season with pristine freshness, or compare inch for inch with a fabric at five times the price has nothing to do with the fashion value involved.

* * *

AND when it comes to lame, my goodness, how it is true that all which glitters is not gold! Why not take a whirl at one of the new dinner gowns that show a lame shirtwaist over a plain crepe skirt, and enjoy the vogue at its top? It can be done for "something around twenty dollars" and an extreme style of this sort is worth precious little more as an investment, amusing and becoming as it is.

The best sequins, like the best velvet, may allure a woman, but for one of those trick dinner rocks that are lightened up by shiny sequins sprinkled over the bodice or long sleeves, just as much joy and service can be had from the cheaper ones as the finest, unless one intends to found a line of attic heirlooms.

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

The dinner gown with the low-cut back, to the left of the sketch, is plain heavy crepe, with gracious, becoming drapery about the shoulders, and the popular long sleeves. A cluster of big flowers is the only trimming. The other frock is very sophisticated in a youthful manner. Its scant blouse is all-over sequin embroidery; its long skirt that dips a bit behind is plain black crepe; its Spanish sash is a bright shade of crimson. With the little veiled hats that both girls wear, and the long black gloves on one, they make two charming, worldly costumes.

Women's Club To Present Play

"The Last Christmas," by Paul Moffett, will be presented by the dramatic committee of the New Kensington Woman's Club at the Christmas meeting, Thursday, December 14.

The play calls for quaint, old-fashioned costumes of the bustle period and there has been much rummaging in old trunks with the result that some very interesting gowns will be worn.

At high noon Thanksgiving Day in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude L. Logan, of Nevada street, Swissvale, their daughter, Miss Sarah Emma Logan became the bride of John Ira Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Jackson, of Cleveland, O.

Japanese-Chinese Debate at Club Spirited

Spirited and interesting was the Japanese-Chinese debate conducted yesterday before the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club by Kinnosuke Adachi, former editor of The Pacific Era, and Dr. No Young Park, a Manchurian student at Harvard and author of "Making a New China."

Dr. Park claimed that China's having been weakened by her civil war opened the way for Japanese aggression and that any excuse would have served as Japan was expansion-bent. A strong point emphasized by him was that individuals are governed by traffic rules and until nations observe treaties no nation will be safe from war.

CRIPPLE ADMITS HE KILLED FATHER TO ESCAPE ABUSE

Democrats Forget Zeal For City Manager

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Dec. 5.—Democrats, who in the regular session of 1933 were hot crusaders for a bill to permit Pittsburgh to decide whether it would adopt the city manager form of government, have cooled in this special session.

Mr. Shields

Some carping Republicans, with a tendency to low criticism, point out that last winter Republicans controlled the administration in Pittsburgh, and at that time bade fair to continue to do so.

Then came the cataclysmic upset which tossed William N. McNair, Democrat, into the Mayor's chair, effective next month. And shortly thereafter the Legislature was called into special session. Naturally it was assumed that the Democrats would immediately push for the city manager system.

Fidelity to principle demanded some such action.

On two separate occasions the Democratic leaders with a fanfare of trumpets, once quite exclusively, as they thought, announced that the bill would be put in. Representative John J. Kane, elected as a member of City Council at the recent municipal amazement, was to author the bill, as he did last winter.

Mr. Kane had the bill all written, though it was carefully worded so as not to disrupt the terms of the newly-elected members of Council.

* * *

Ruling Convenient Loophole for Democrats

Then the measure was put up to John Fertig, head of the Legislative Reference Bureau. Mr. Fertig, with some perspicacity which establishes a record for that sort of thing, decreed that such legislation was not within the Governor's call.

That was just dandy for the Democrats. They might have gone to Attorney General Schnader, much better informed than is Mr. Fertig as to what the Governor would permit to come within the call. But that might have been bad business.

It might have opened the way for the Democrats to introduce the bill, which they really didn't want to do. Mayor-elect McNair had said he was against it, and among the Allegheny County delegation were patriots who last winter were hot for city management and now are cold toward the project.

* * *

Could Have Been Given Economy Label

The Governor's call permits the introduction of bills which would reduce the cost of government. Theoretically the city manager form of government would do that. All that was necessary was that the salary of the Mayor should be reduced, for instance. Uunder any conditions the Mayor, laboring with a city manager, is no more than a greeter.

Under other measures the salary of Councilmen might have been reduced. It was no trick at all to bring the bill within the purview of the legislative call.

But the Democrats did not do so. They have been content to let the city manager bill go by default, and this prime principle of Democratic policy of the early winter of 1933 now becomes a dead letter.

Certainly it cannot be that the Republicans are right, and that the Democrats were for the proposal only when it threatened the tenure of office of their opponents. Political leaders taking their cue from the crusade being conducted by President Roosevelt, would hardly be guilty of such inconsistency.

It is especially doubtful that they would be guilty of such tactics in view of the zeal with which Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence said the bill would be pushed—even though Mr. Lawrence's observation came prior to the friendly interposition of Mr. Fertig, who holds his job from the Legislature, and not from the Governor, who promulgated this call.

Visitors to Celebrate—If Sufficiently Sober

Today the Pennsylvania repeal convention meets to ratify this state's adherence to the Twenty-first Amendment to the Constitution, thereby rescinding the noted and notorious Eighteenth Amendment.

There will be much ceremony—and whoopee.

The Legislature plans to recess while the proceedings are being run through.

Indeed, there are some visitors in Harrisburg who promise this afternoon to sober up to celebrate repeal.

Falling Casting Kills Trafford Man

George Dency, 63, of 839 Eighth street, Trafford, died last night in Braddock Hospital from injuries suffered several hours before when a casting fell on him in the Trafford foundry of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, according to the coroner's report. He was a coremaker.

Man Hurt in Fall In Railroad Station

Robert Burns, 38, of 732 E st Lacock street, suffered a probable fracture of the skull in a fall down a flight of stairs in the Fort Wayne Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, North Side, yesterday. He was taken to Allegheny General Hospital.

CWA SHOWDOWN DEMANDED BY M'GOVERN

South Park Jobs Seen Tomorrow by County Highways Chief

Chariman C. C. McGovern called the CWA on the carpet at today's County Commissioners' meeting and voiced his bewilderment as to why only eight men are now on Civil Works jobs in South Park when there are supposed to be 60 employed. To County Highways Director Thomas O. Hasley, who was called to explain, McGovern said:

"We're going to do this thing right or stop it. And it will stop before tomorrow night. Somebody has got to put up or shut up. The county has been spending money and expects some results. We're not going to continue to spend if this thing is going to turn out to be a sugar-coated pill."

WORK PLEDGED TOMORROW

Hasley explained that the men had been requisitioned and should be at work tomorrow.

While McGovern talked, efforts were being made by CWA officials to notify the first 350 CWA workers to report on jobs in Pittsburgh that were to have started yesterday.

According to H. J. Johnson, Jr., city engineer, the CWA employment agency failed to notify the men to report for work yesterday. Tools and materials for the new workers were left untouched at the job sites.

Requesting $700,000 in cash to forestall "disruption of the county's program," James L. Stuart, county administrator, tossed a bombshell in Council meeting yesterday afternoon. His letter stated that the money will be needed immediately to buy materials and tools for the 10,000 men whom the CWA hopes to employ in the city.

PROJECTS STILL PLANNED

Since the sale of the $1,400,000 worth of city bonds, which Council approved, will take three or four weeks, it is doubtful that the funds can be supplied in accordance with Stuart's request.

County projects are still being planned. Among those now being considered by the County Commissioners, involving the employment of 1,022 men, are jobs on the following highways: Port Vue-Lovedale road, Millerstown-Culmerville road, KDKA boulevard, Greenock-Buena Vista road and the Bull Creek road.

COUNTY O. K.'S 2 MILLION LOAN

The County Commissioners today authorized County Treasurer Robert S. Cain to borrow $2,000,000 from the Union Trust Company to meet current expenses the remainder of this year and the first half of 1934.

One half of the loan will be negotiated tomorrow, the other when occasion warrants. The note bears 4½ per cent interest and is due August 4, 1934. The county may, however, save interest by taking up the note in advance of the due date if funds are available.

West Homestead Approves CWA Plans

A program of civic improvements which will give work to approximately 100 men in West Homestead was approved by the borough council last night and will be presented to the Civic Works Administration.

Sinclair Powell, West Homestead borough engineer, devised a plan and it was approved by council last night. It was also voted that there would be no penalty assessed on delinquent taxes paid before January 1.

Homestead Seeks $52,000 From U. S.

P. H. McGuire, Homestead borough engineer, and M. J. Haupt, are to go to Washington to request a loan of $52,000 from the Civic Works Administration to construct a water works for their borough. Members of Homestead Council voted to send the two to Washington last night.

Variety Members Seeking Home For Sheridan Theater Foundling

Facing a New Life

Here is how the Sun-Telegraph's Candid Camera watched Catherine Variety Sheridan—the little girl found in a theater lobby on a cold December night and adopted by and named for the Variety Club—at luncheon. With the first of the year, her identity is to be wiped out and she will secretly get a new name, a new home and, at last, a mother and a daddy.

"OH, YES, I'D LIKE TO HAVE A MAMMA AND A PAPA!"

Catherine, Now Five, Has $3,500 Bank Account

A mother, a daddy and a home—for Catherine Variety Sheridan.

That is the aim of Pittsburgh's Variety Club, which five years ago took under its wing a chubby, dark-haired, dark-eyed baby deserted on a cold December night in the Sheridan Square Theater.

Reared in the glamor of the show world, and darling of hundreds of show folks, little Catherine is to be given a mother and a daddy and a home for a New Year present, according to John H. Harris, her original benefactor.

NEEDS A MOTHER

Pointing out that the one thing the club's tiny ward needs more than anything else—the love of a mother—is the one thing beyond the club's power, Harris said:

"After the first of the year she'll never again be known as Catherine Variety Sheridan—the little girl left in a theater. She's going to have every chance in life, and if we can't find the right home for her we'll send her to a private school."

Hundreds of letters offering the child a home have been received in recent weeks, Harris revealed, but only a few seem to be worthy of investigation. The majority, he said, are from cranks and persons apparently swayed by little Catherine's bank account—now about $3,500—or seeking to break into the show business.

TWO TO KNOW NAME

Only two members of the club will know their ward's whereabouts and her name—two, in the event one dies or goes away—and those two will be responsible for her welfare. Through them the club will provide for her education and otherwise maintain its role of "Good Samaritan."

One of little Catherine's last public appearances will be at a luncheon in the club's William Penn Hotel headquarters tomorrow, when she'll play hostess to Charlotte Henry, the movies' "Alice of Wonderland."

DINNER HONORS GEN. MALONE

Reserve officers from many sections of Western Pennsylvania will be in Pittsburgh tomorrow for a dinner and reception at the Keystone Athletic Club in honor of Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commanding the Third Corps Area. At least 300 reserve officers and many National Guard and regular Army officers will attend.

Gen. Malone, accompanied by Col. H. N. Cootes, corps reserve liaison officer, and an aide-de-camp, will be met by the executive committee f the Pittsburgh Chapter, Reserve Officers' Association, at the Pennsylvania Station at 6:10 p. m., and conducted with police escort to the club. Beside Gen. Malone and Col. Cootes the speakers at the dinner will be Congressman Faddis, of Waynesburg; Col. H. L. Landers, chief of staff of the 99th Division and ranking "regular" in Western Pennsylvania, and County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, a colonel in the Military Intelligence Reserves. The keynote of the meeting will be "National Defense."

COUNTY TO ASK TRUCK BIDS

Allegheny County will advertise for single truck and possibly truck fleet rental on a bid basis, Director of Supplies Ray Sprigle announced today.

Bids will be taken for the remainder of this year and for 1934.

The rule that no truck owner may rent more than one vehicle to the county will remain in effect unless pressure of CWA work makes it impossible to obtain sufficient in that manner. In connection with the CWA, some trucks without drivers will be asked.

City Solicitor's Aide Leaves $1,000 Estate

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 5.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Talked to the Philippine delegation going through here on their way to Washington. Missed seeing Manuel Quezon, their very able leader.

Will Rogers

They will be a unique delegation in Washington, and one that I believe the President will welcome, for they are asking for liberty and not money. A thing like that is unheard of.

Why can't we set the Philippines free now? We kept 'em for years just on account of their sugar. When they take you off liquor, you crave sugar and sweets. Well, today we go back on a liquor diet, so they can take us off sugar. That automatically sets the Philippines free.

Yours,

WILL.

Teacher Back of Pupils In New Seating Plan

The old system of facing the blackboard in the public school room is no more in the Electric Plan school, Turtle Creek.

With it, perhaps, has gone the mischievous boy's peace of mind.

The seating arrangements in the school rooms are being changed so that the seats are lined diagonally, instead of parallel with the walls. The rearrangement was made at the suggestion of Miss Evelyn M. Carpenter, of the State Department of Public Instruction, as a means of conserving vision.

Under the new arrangement, light from windows will fall over the left shoulders of the pupils and the glare from blackboards no longer will be in the children's eyes.

The school "bad boy" will find it more difficult to keep an eye on the teacher. She will sit in a rear corner of the room.

PAIR TATTLED, VOTE FRAUD JURY TOLD

Defense Rocked When U. S. Says Defendants 'Peached' on Others

The defense in the fourth federal vote fraud trial was rocked today by testimony of a government investigator that two of the five defendants on trial had "peached" on two others.

E. J. Connolly, of the United States Bureau of Investigation, called as the government's last witness, testified that Albert Levine and William Kennedy, inspectors of the election board, Tenth District, Fourth Ward, had voluntarily made statements before First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh yesterday before the opening of the trial.

Mothers of the two men were reported to have accompanied them to the Federal Building.

Connolly said he and N. D. Zimmerman, another investigator, were present.

HEAD IN DOORWAY

According to Connolly's testimony, Levine stated that after the close of the polls at the November election, 1932, in the polling place in the Oakland M. E. Church, Forbes and Boquet streets, Howard Neely, Republican ward chairman, put his head in the door and said:

"'Shine' (meaning Albert Diulus, judge of election), Muldowney needs all the votes he can get."

Diulus and Joseph Ridge, election constable, joined Neely in a hallway, Levine stated according to the witness.

Ridge, Diulus, Kennedy, Levine and Charles F. Morrison, clerk, are on trial charged with conspiracy to violate the election laws.

DISAPPEARING BALLOTS

Levine was quoted by Connolly as having seen 70 Democratic ballots at Ridge's feet while the count was being made.

Kennedy related, Connolly testified, that he had met Ridge some time after the election and that Ridge had told him:

"I got rid of those ballots."

Ray Byrnes, county highways driver, testified he had collected the ballot box from the office of Alderman Louis C. Wicks and that it was empty and unlocked.

Seventy witnesses testified for the government that they had voted straight Democratic tickets. Only 43 votes were credited to Mrs. Anne E. Felix, the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Thirty-second Congressional District, according to the Election Board's returns. Mrs. Felix contested the election of M. J. Muldowney, Republican.

The defense opened shortly after the noon recess.

Wife's Dog Bit Him, Sad Comedian Sues

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The trouble Ned Sparks had with his wife's dog was described by the gloomy-faced film comedian today in his answer to her suit for separate maintenance.

Sparks, who asked for a divorce in the cross-complaint, said his wife, Mercedes, bought a vicious dog, which bit him and his friends. Despite this, she always considered the comfort and welfare of the dog in preference to his, he said.

Oswald Jacoby, member of the championship challenge contract team-of-four, and his wife also were out.

Bridge enthusiasts totaling 208 from all sections of the country competed in two sections of the contract mixed pair event, and 14 pairs survived each to enter the finals this afternoon.

MOTHER TELLS OF ATTACKS ON SON

Young Slayer Gives Self Up After Shooting

Crippled Theodore Kisiel, 20, was to be turned over to the coroner today to be held on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of his father, Stanley Kisiel, 45, of 417 Beech way, Duquesne, late yesterday.

Mr. Kisiel

The shooting climaxed attacks on the son and his mother, Mrs. Catherine Kisiel, 40, suffered from Kisiel, police said the two told them.

After his father fell dead with a bullet wound in the chest in the back yard of their home, Theodore calmly walked four blocks to the Duquesne Police Station, surrendered and turned over a 38-caliber revolver.

FACES GRILLING

The youth was brought to Pittsburgh this morning by County Detective Michael McDermott for questioning by District Attorney Andrew T. Park and County Detective Chief George W. Murren.

The crippled youth told police he and his brother, Stanley, Jr., 12, were stacking wood in the cellar when the father went into the yard and told them they weren't working fast enough. The parent became abusive and began throwing the wood through the cellar window, Theodore said. Some of the pieces hit the young cripple and others struck his electric saw.

When Theodore shut the window, the father, enraged, ran into the cellar with a hatchet, according to the story to police. The son said he disarmed his father after being struck several times.

The father then returned to the yard and again began throwing the wood into the cellar. Stanley, also in the yard, said he heard a shot and saw his father fall to the ground.

MOTHER DEFENDS SON

Defending her son, Mrs. Kisiel told police that she had to obtain employment to support her crippled son and four other children because her husband seldom worked. She was unaware her son had a revolver, she said.

A short time after the youth had been placed in a cell Stanley and his sister, Mary, 5, walked into the police station with woolen blankets, coffee and sandwiches. They had been sent by their mother.

Theodore, crippled by infantile paralysis, earned money by making sleds, wagons and other toys for neighborhood youngsters in his basement workshop.

Deputy Coroner Robert D. Newman said Theodore had purchased the revolver from a mail order house in Chicago and had hidden it in a tool chest in the basement.

ESCAPES CHAIR, GETS 100 YEARS

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(AP.)—James (Iggy) Varecha, youthful killer and robber, yesterday escaped the electric chair in a new trial, but was sentenced by Judge Benjamin P. Epstein to serve 100 years in the state prison.

Varecha, now 18, was given the long term for the slaying of Frank Jordan last year. He also was sentenced to terms of one year to life on a robbery charge and from one to 14 years for assault to kill growing out of the robbery of James C. McElligott.

Previously Varecha was sentenced to die in the chair, but the State Supreme Court ordered a new trial because Varecha had been adjudged feeble-minded. A jury last week determined he was sane. Varecha then entered a plea of guilty and went before Judge Epstein for sentence.

Mrs. Zeok further sets forth in her bill of particulars that the doctor told her he was "lord and master" of his household. She avers that this is what the doctor compelled her to do:

"Keep his shoes polished, attend to the household duties of a 10-room house, act as secretary and office attendant for the libellant, and do the scrubbing, whitewashing and other things in maintaining the home."

GOLMAR LOSES RECOUNT APPEAL

Recount judges paved the way today for a contest over the election returns from the First District, West Homestead, when they turned down a request from Republican watchers to throw out the box on the ground of fraud. The judges decided to let the official return stand, ignoring the changed figures in the recount.

This was the ballot box in which 811 ballots were found, though only 789 voters were registered from the district and in which, if the box is thrown out, the lead of Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar would increase over his defeated opponent, John Heinz.

Witnesses called by Republican watchers tried to show that as many as 21 ballots were torn off the pads before voting began. One declared that Andrew Falls, judge, so stated before voting began. Another Republican watcher in the district testified that though he was the fourth to vote there his ballot was numbered 28.

Falls denied making any such statement, or that any ballots were missing when voting began.

RADIO STATIONS HELD LIABLE FOR TALKS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The Supreme Court has in effect, held that radio broadcasting companies can be sued for libel as a result of political speeches.

By dismissing yesterday, for lack of a federal question, the appeal of KFAB Broadcasting Company, of Lincoln, Neb., the high court left in effect a libel damage verdict obtained by Attorney General C. A. Sorenson, of Nebraska.

The suit originated as a result of the political campaign of 1930. Sorenson charged that Richard F. Wood made defamatory statements against him in a speech from Station KFAB. In appealing the radio company declared that it was protected against libel suits such as that of Sorenson because of the Federal Radio Act.

Attorneys for the company declared that political broadcasting would have to be virtually abolished if the ruling of the Nebraska Supreme Court remained in effect.

OPERATOR 13 — By Robert W. Chambers

Gail Hurries Away To Avoid Capture By Confederates

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

There was a frightful rush of horses, guns and yelling men in the blue jackets as Averell's horsemen churned the water of Kelly's ford into a mass of foam. Down went Fitzhugh Lee's gray jackets; the Second Virginia pickets were sabered or overwhelmed and their supporting company scattered and chased toward Culpeper. The crash of gunfire at the ford rose to a sustained air.

Operator 13 had run downstairs and out through the trees to the main camp road. Past her thundered Breathed's horse artillery. Then Stuart rode by with Pelham—volunteer spectators of Fitz Lee's developing fight, the Third Virginia thundering on their heels, followed by Rosser's command.

For two long hours the blue-jacketed horsemen and gunners had been crossing Kelly's Ford; and now the 3rd gray jackets struck them a mile inland, followed by the yelling 5th. Into these galloped two Pennsylvania regiments, tearing a bloody way toward their fighting Rhode Island and Maine comrades. There came a dazzle of flashing sabers and a deafening burst of carbine fire.

John Pelham, reveling in the uproar, turned to call out reassuringly to the 3rd Virginia, which seemed to be in some confusion. Then a gun in a Yankee horse battery flashed, and a shell, bursting in the mud, tore the boy out of his saddle and ripped his big black mare to bloody shreds.

* * *

All day long the cavalry battled along the road to Kelly's Ford with crimsoned sabers and spitting carbines fired at such close range that the muzzle flames set the troopers' jackets afire. Again and again the gray jackets galloped yelling into the Yankee squadrons that savagely fought back, shot for shot and blow for blow.

Receding Tide

At dusk their massive formations, now nearly two miles inland on the Culpeper road, began to retrace that road to the fatal river. Up at Blythedale they heard the cannonading become duller and more distant.

Old Maj. Blythe, gray and grim, sat listening to the receding roar of a Yankee raid that had failed. As all other Yankee raids had failed—after the awful damage they had done. Ashby yesterday and John Pelham today.

The boy lay at the Shackleford house. Beside him, her eyes blinded by tears, the girl he had loved was sewing on his shroud . . .

What Has Gone Before

The Union cavalry generals complained bitterly that they could not surprise their brave and alert enemies, Jeb Stuart and Fitzhugh Lee. Col. Sharpe, head of the Federal Secret Service, told them it was because of the activities of a girl Confederate spy, Antonia Ford, whose ancestral home was at Culpeper.

Clever, bold and resourceful, Miss Ford was a vital link in Gen. Stuart's chain of spies. So, Col. Sharpe sent beautiful Gail Loveless, Operator 13 in the Federal Secret Service, to Culpeper. Operator 13, an accomplished actress and a daring and successful spy, went to Culpeper and actually became the house guest of Antonia Ford. Her instructions were to checkmate the other girl's efforts and, if opportunity presented, to surrender her to the Union Army for punishment.

Gail Loveless, for her part, was certain to be hanged if the Confederates discovered her identity. Following a cavalry review, a party of Confederate officers came to the house for a midday dinner. One of them was Capt. Jack Gailliard. Gail began to tease him about his reputed conquests, but suddenly he threw her into confusion by calmly announcing that he loved her.

Gail, in love with Gailliard, could not warn him of dangers that beset him. He kissed her goodby and rode away on a secret mission with Miss Ford. Because of Operator 13's warnings Antonia Ford was captured, but Gailliard, apparently, escaped. Gen. Averell, acting after a delay of days, on Operator 13's information regarding enemy strength, started his rush across the Potomac with his bluejacket riders.

Now Go on With the Story

A stab of fright pierced the girl. Then she rose and followed the maid to the kitchen door, where a shadowy figure stood.

"Evenin', ma'am," quavered the old man. "I'se come fo' de fish money, lady."

Operator 13 looked stealthily about her in the lantern-lit darkness. "What message?" she whispered.

The girl gave a last frightened glance around her in the starlight; then, gathering up her poplin skirts in both hands, she sped away among the fruit trees, where, in the meadow, the little pond lay glittering and set with trembling stars.

Ragged Girl

In one thorn-torn hand she still clutched a revolver with chilled and stiffened fingers.

The cavalry sentry at Col. Sharpe's quarters halted them in the lantern light; the girl straightened up, rubbed her heavy eyes and pulled down the ragged flounces over her naked knees. Chilled to the bone, she was scarcely able to unclose her cramped fingers and push the revolver back into her saddle holster.

A platoon of cavalry rode up leading five officers' horses. The troops stared solemnly at the two scouts. They took the girl in the pink rags for a rebel spy and were sorry for her.

Presently three zouave officers of the fifty-fifth and one hundred and forty-sixth New York regiments in red, black and gold; a captain of the Sixth Lancers and a blue dragoon major came clanking out of Colonel Sharpe's big wall tent and mounted their horses, casting curious glances at the two spies.

Colonel Sharpe followed them, a tall, handsome figure in the lantern light. When he caught sight of the girl on Gimlet he came forward, courteously.

"Are you hurt, ma'am?" he asked in his pleasant voice. She tried to speak. Then he coolly passed one gold embroidered arm around her waist, lifted her out of the wet saddle, and set her on her feet.

But Operator 13 couldn't stand; so the tall colonel, summoning John Babcock with a nod, carried her into his warm lamp-lit quarters and placed her in a padded armchair before the glowing stove. An orderly brought her a cup of something aromatic and steaming hot. She held it to her lips with both scarred and trembling hands.

"No sir, They shot her hat off when we were swimming Gimlet across the river above. She's just tired and cold."

The spiced eggnog laced with brandy sent a reviving flame through her chilled body. Col. Sharpe wrapped her in a traveling rug; Babcock pulled off her soaked pumps and lifted her feet to a hassock in the glow of the camp stove.

The girl's lips were blue and quivering; tears began to steal down her dirty cheeks.

Ready to Hear

Col. Sharpe seated himself on a camp chair and motioned Babcock to do the same. To the orderly he said: "Look after that horse at once!" To the scout he added quietly: "What's your story, Jack?"

"Well, sir," said the scout, "I've remained in touch with Operator 13, as you directed. You've had her reports from Culpeper through me. Then the unexpected happened—as usual. On the night of the eighth Mosby's Rangers slipped through Gen. Stoneman's pickets near Chantilly and nabbed Gen. Stoughton in his bed at Fairfax Courthouse."

Col. Sharpe nodded pleasantly. He almost smiled.

"Operator 13," continued the scout, "sent me a warning that Miss Antonia Ford had ridden out of Culpeper with a Confederate secret service officer and that something probably was brewing along the river. But Gen. Averell's and Col. Wyndham's pickets noticed nothing; and, as for Mosby, he was in and out of Fairfax and away before Wyndham guessed what had happened.

"Then, sir, it was helterskelter everywhere, with Wyndham's cavalry riding the river like crazy folk; and Stanton wild with rage. But I kept on after Antonio Ford and Gaston's chief scout, Capt. Gailliard.

"Well, sir, a Federal detective finally located Miss Ford and arrested her, and telegraphed for me. But she already had managed to send a grapevine telegram to Fitzhugh Lee warning him that Averell had started up the river, and that there must be a Yankee spy somewhere in Culpeper."

"How did she guess that?" interrupted Sharpe.

"Pure accident, sir. It's always some accident that finally hangs us. You see, sir, a picket of the Second Virginia cavalry down at Rappahannock Station stole a basket of fish from an old Negro and started to clean and fry them. They discovered a lady's comb inside a big green bass. One of the teeth of the comb broke off. It was hollow; and in it was a roll of tissue with no writing on it. But these rebel troopers had heard of Yankee tricks. They sent the comb and tissue paper to Gaston's expert chemist, Capt. Gailliard, at Warrenton.

Officer Pleased

"He'd gone on to Aldie, but Miss Ford was there, and she took the issue and treated it and read it; and then she sent the grapevine message to Fitz Lee to look for a spy in his own camp. All this Miss Ford triumphantly admitted, and defied us to do anything about it. So we sent her to Washington—but you know, sir, how the President is. And I guess she knows he won't let her be harmed.

"Well, anyway, those gay and clever Johnnies at Rappahannock Station had let the old Negro go, after robbing him of his fish. I found him hobbling along near Culpeper and sent him in to Blythedale to bring Miss Loveless to me. That is how it all happened, sir."

"And you put here on your horse and led her all the way from Culpeper wood into the camp?" asked Col. Sharpe quietly.

"Yes, sir, I had to."

Col. Sharpe leaned over and shook the scout's dirty hand. "The honor of the Secret Service Corps is very safe in your keeping, John Babcock," he said.

The eggnog and the warmth of the stove were making Operator 13 drowsy again. Col. Sharpe turned to her and said:

"You were sent out to catch Miss Ford. She's been caught.

Southern Girl Spy Causes Failure of Yankee Attack

Gen. Stoneman acted on your further information; and why Gen. Averell didn't go on to Culpeper and destroy Fitz Lee God only knows. You did your part, ma'am; Jack Babcock did his; I have tried to do mine. Our records are clean."

He rose, picked up Operator 13, shawl and all, and, holding her cradled in his muscular arms, walked through the tented corridor into a log cabin where a large fat Negress was soaping clothes in a washtub.

"Aunty," said he, "here's a tired and very sore young lady who would enjoy a hot soaping, some arnica, some clean blankets, a hot supper and a warm bed. Because she must be well rested and all ready to do some very important business for me by tomorrow, see that she is fit and ready."

He looked down at his burden smilingly, and his burden looked up at him out of wide, velvety eyes.

"You heard what I said, ma'am?"

"Yes, sir, I shall be fit and ready."

ACTRESS THEFT SUSPECTS HELD

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Charged with robbing Mae West of $20,400 in money and jewels more than a year ago, two men were under arrest today and a third was sought.

Harry O. Voiler, one-time manager for the late Texas Guinan, was being held in Chicago in connection with the robbery, and Edward H. Friedman was held here. Detroit police have been asked to search for Morris Cohen.

The three were indicted by the grand jury here yesterday.

Chief of Police James E. Davis said Friedman confessed the robbery and named Voiler and Cohen as his accomplices. Voiler, who had known Miss West for several years and frequently accompanied the screen star in her automobile to the studio, was named by Friedman as the "finger man" and directing leader in the robbery.

Friedman said the actress was robbed in front of her apartment when Miss West, her manager, J. A. Timony, and Voiler drove up in Voiler's automobile.

EAST ELATED OVER COLUMBIA'S ROSE BOWL BID

SPORT COMMENT

RECORDS DO NOT PLACE LIONS AT TOP

Stanford had the privilege of selecting its opponent for the e Bowl football game, and perhaps it's not for any outsider uestion the choice. But if, as the fans have been led to believe, the selection is based on record made and nature of schedule played, gridiron followers may be pardoned for wondering from what angle Columbia rated the bid. Princeton was the only real top-notch team met by Columbia all season, and the Tigers crushed Lou Little's eleven, 20 to 0. Every team defeated by Columbia lost two or more additional games, indicating that the schedule was not overly tough. Lehigh, Viriginia and Lafayette, each lost four other games besides the one dropped to the Lions; Navy and Syracuse each lost three others, and Cornell and Penn State each lost two others. The Virginia game was Columbia's closest approach to an intersectional contest.

Lou Little

The only team met by both Columbia and Pitt was Navy, where Columbia made only 10 points against the Middies, made 34. If the Pasadena invitation is extended for comial reasons rather than for team merits, perhaps previous ts out there rendered Pitt undesirable. But, leaving out of it, if teams that had lost only one game, like Coia, were eligible, it might have been a more popular step und out Army. Too, Nebraska, and Duke, appeared to be ast as deserving as Columbia. Coach Little himself said itly that Army and Pitt were the best teams in the East.

N GRIDDERS NOT GIVEN HIGH RATING

Among five all-America teams picked so far by press astions and leading newspapers, not a Columbia player has named. Right in the Lions' home city, the New York picked first and second all-America teams and gave 100 ional players honorable mention. The only Lions in the vere Matal at end on the second team and Montgomery onorable mention among the quarterbacks. The New York ld-Telegram gave Columbia no higher recognition than the ng of Montgomery on its third team.

However, if that's Stanford's idea of the best available in the territory embracing the East, Middle West and h, it's O. K. with the rest of us, and congratulations are Columbia on being selected. At least, this district will the distinction of being doubly representd on the team g to the Coast. Of the two regular Columbia tackles, Joe ara is a Pittsburgher and Paul Jackel lives in McKeesport.

ERATION EXPECTED TO IMPROVE BERGER

Walter Berger is an unusual ball player off the field, as as on it. The custom in baseball, when a star has undergone an operation, is for the player to declare that his physical ent handicaped him for a long and kept him from doing his best , and that he is sure to have a big on in the year just ahead. But the ging outfielder of the Braves, whose ndix was removed recently in a on hospital, is frank to admit that appendix never bothered him much. annot truthfully say," he remarks, it ever worried me, cramped my at bat, or hobbled me in the outor on the bases."

Wally Berger

Many a pitcher who has faced Berto his sorrow will assure you that statement was unnecessary. Still, ost unusual to find a player not g on such a situation to tell how ly he was handicaped by his cal troubles. At that, Manager Bill McKechnie and other officials are confident that Berger will be an improved r in all departments in 1934, which is anything but a int prospect for Wally's opponents on other clubs.

N SENTIMENT SWAYS GRID RANKINGS

In the picking of all-America football teams, sentiment times plays a larger part than good judgment. In this ection, Harry Salsinger relates that a certain member of m in the Middle West has been ballyhooed since August place on the mythical eleven, despite the fact that there three or four better men in the lineup. The explanation found in a varsity program, in which there appeared under trait of the highly boosted player the lines "Most popular in the university."

That's how it comes that all-America pickers, seeking a on players in various parts of the country, sometimes find ifficult to separate honest opinions from those ruled purely sentiment. Sometimes it is sentiment for the college er represents, and sometimes it is sentiment for the player self, or even for his family. The late Knute Rockne once arked "Great quarterbacks have few friends." It was another way of saying that rarely is the most popular man in college a good football player, since a football player, to become of the first rank, has to devote so much time to the game that he has little time left for campus associations.

LLANDER ONE OF RING'S UNLUCKY BOXERS

When the ring's unlucky boxers are listed, Bep Van Klaveren must be given a place near the top. A jinx has camped on the trail of the Hollander ever since he came to this country.

A cut over one of Bep's eyes handicaped him in several outs, and caused his fight with Billy Petrolle to be halted.

Three times a return match had to be postponed because the cut failed to heal or was reopened, and finally it was called off altogether. Matched with Tony Falco for last Friday night, Van Klaveren had to cancel the engagement because of an attack of grip. Illness or injury has interfered with several other bouts for which he was signed during the last year.

REINSTATEMENT OF GOLDSTEIN OPPOSED

New York critics say more things happen to Van Klaveren than to any other boxer in the East except Ruby Goldstein. However, Van Klaveren's illnesses and injuries are real, they admit, which cannot always be said in the case of Goldstein. Speaking of Ruby, it is reported that the plan to have him reinstated in New York will meet with the stiffest opposition from Commissioner Bill Brown, who thinks the game is better off without him. Goldstein was set down when Frankie Petrolle disclosed that he had been asked to take a dive for that fighter.

Ruby Goldstein

Boxers, managers and officials in New York are finding Brown a most exacting Commissioner. Pete Hartley, called in to explain his action in stopping the Loughran-Impellittiere bout prematurely, escaped with a reprimand, but was warned to use better judgment in future under penalty of having his license revoked. Brown is sparing nobody in his stand.

ANSON GREEN WINS NEGRO RING TITLE

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Allegheny County eliminations in Western Pennsylvania amateur tournament, Elks Hall, Etna.
Gorilla Jones vs. Frank Remus, 10 rounds, Seattle.
West Virginia amateur tournament, Bluefield, W. Va.
Kid Brunet vs. Willard Brown, 10 rounds, Beaumont, Tex.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Anson Green, of Homestead, is the champion among the local Negro middleweight boxers.

He demonstrated this two weeks ago when he bested Billy Holt, of Homewood, in a 10-round battle in the Moose Temple, Downtown, although he didn't get the decision, and he clinched his claim when he not only won but drew down the referee's vote in a return battle in the same ring last night.

One of the judges voted for Holt, but the other one agreed with the referee.

VICTOR PACES WELL

Green paced himself well in the second battle, which was not quite as sultry as the first, but plenty interesting nevertheless. He piled up a lead in the first four rounds and made a punching finish in the last two. He dropped Billy for no count with a right to the jaw early in the second and jolted him again before the bell and drove him to cover again in the ninth and tenth.

Holt was at his best in the middle rounds. He won the fifth and sixth and held his own in the next two by going to close quarters and blazing away, but he couldn't resist the temptation to come out in the open again in the ninth and leave himself open for the heavy rights which Green throws so well from the outside.

DURSO BEATS DIREK

Johnny Durso, of Oakland, defeated Johnny Birek, local lightweight rival, in the six-round semi-final, a good mixing battle. Jack Dalcherone, Springdale middleweight, repeated an earlier victory over Kid Barry, Kittanning Negro, in the second bout, in which he floored his man for nine in the first round and won the decision, and Georgie Smith, of the North Side, who boxed for three years while in the Army in the Hawaiian Islands, added a win over Al Farone to a recent victory over Jimmy Loizes.

Between Rounds

Johnny Bowen, one of the six Bowen brothers, formerly of New Castle, is in Pittsburgh en route to California with a group of boxers headed by Al Cortez, of Philadelphia, a light-heavyweight, who has done most of his boxing in Florida and claims a victory over Russ Rowsey. Bowen is a former boxer, as are his brothers, Andy and Eddie, who showed here some years ago, and Billy and George, while Ray still is boxing, having recently met Wesley Ramey at Alexandria, Va., just outside Washington, D. C., where the Bowen family makes its home. Ray would like to show here. He has fought Buster Brown, Lew Raymond, Jack Portney, Jimmy Reed and Toosie Bashara, in addition to Ramey.

Norman Conrad boxes Mickey Dugan in a six-rounder in Cleveland next Tuesday night.

Greenleaf Leads In Cue Tourney

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Ralph Greenleaf, New York City, defending his title here for the thirteenth time, won the opening game of the world pocket billiard championship tournament last night when he defeated Charles Seaback, Astoria, N. Y., 126 to 62, in 27 innings. The champion had a high run of 33 to a 14 for his opponent.

Today's schedule brings together Andrew Ponzi and George Kelly, both of Philadelphia, in the first afternoon game. Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, and Young William Mosconi, also of Philadelphia, play the second matinee performance. James Caras, of Wilmington, Del., and Pasquale Natalie, Chicago, meet in the only night game.

QUIGLEY VISITS HERE

Ernest C. Quigley, veteran umpire of the National League, spent a short visit at the home office of the Pirates yesterday. Ernie was en route to his Kansas home from Washington where Saturday he refereed the grid contest between the George Washington University eleven and the University of Kansas.

TRI-STATE LOOP 'REFORMS'

The Tri-State College Class B Athletic Conference all but cracked up on the shoals of eligibility as it held its semi-annual meeting yesterday at the Fort Pitt Hotel

The cry of "hypocricy" was raised by the men who guide the destinies of six district colleges. There was a time when Grove City College stepped out and treated itself and its supporters to a grid team that could hardly be classed with the simon-pures, but Bob Thorn, big medicine man of the Grovers, showed where that day was passed.

Thorn apparently wants to be a real amateur or else put the cards on the table and thus toss aside all cloaks that tend to show that things are not what they seem. So the Grovers have recanted, and along with Thiel College they have not given a place on their schedules to Waynesburg College which is placed in a unique position.

THORN CALLS TURN

The Wolfpack is still a part of the Conference, but it will not be eligible to play for the title this year as its schedule contains only three Conference games, and a Conference member must play at least four games with Conference rivals to qualify.

Chief Thorn of the Grovers doesn't seem to like the sport procedure as followed by Waynesburg. He inferred it would be better for the Conference to give up the ghost than to proceed along the lines followed in the past year. Thorn demanded a new deal and he won his point as he got through a lengthy resolution which will force all members to submit the lists of football and non-football freshmen and sophomores to Secretary Jack Stoeher with the idea of determining whether any of the schools are favoring the athletes as regards scholarships. Boys who finish in the top third of their respective high schools are permitteed to receive scholarships, but students taking no part in athletics are supposed to be treated the same as the athletes when they are dispensed. The lists will be sent, for an impartial report, to Dr. Adam Leroy Jones, of Columbia University, secretary of the Middle Atlantic States and Maryland Association.

CURRIE ELIGIBLE

A. C. Edgecombe, of Geneva College, backed Frank Wolf, of Waynesburg, in a tiff regarding the status of Halfback Currie, of the Wolfpack. Wolf contended that his ball carrier was entitled to one more year of football as he did not perform in his freshman year. Thorn thought otherwise, but he seconded Edgecombe's motion relative to the resolution which will put such cases at the discretion of the league. In other words, the hard and fast rule covering the point was suspended.

When Dr. Jones makes his report on the evidence submitted by the secretary, another controversy is likely to break out, but this will hardly come to pass before the spring meeting.

"That the Conference commissioner consider the eligibility of an individual whose status with respect to help violates Rule 10 on eligibility, provided the details of the case are presented in writing by the college president concerned. The eligibility of individuals shall be decided upon a vote of the Conference members, and in case of a tied vote, the Conference commissioner shall decide upon the eligibility of the individual."

"That every member college within 10 days send to Secretary Stoeher the following information:

"A list of young men in the freshmen and sophomore classes whose names do not appear in the squad rosters of the football programs and who are receiving financial aid from the college in the form of free tuition, scholarships, loans, jobs, etc., the character of the aid and the total amount of the same in the freshman and sophomore classes; a copy of the football program for one of the 1933 games which contains the squad roster and that the statement showing the above information shall be signed by the president, financial secretary and athletic director.

"Further, that Secretary Stoeher arrange this information together with the information to be found in the eligibility blanks submitted by the colleges to determine the number of non-football players in the freshman and sophore classes who are receiving financial aid and the percentage of freshman and sophomore whose names appear in the squad rosters who are receiving aid and to make a comparison of the total amount of the aid generally given each of the non-football students with the total aid generally given each of the football men."

YAROSZ BEATS PAUL PIRRONE

CLEVELAND, Dec. 5.—Cleveland boxing fans today were singing the praises of Teddy Yarosz, uncrowned king of the middleweights. Last night, in the Cleveland Auditorium, the East Liverpool (O.) star decisively laced hard-hitting Paul Pironne with 10,000 spectators looking on.

The bout was one of a benefit fund card consisting of four all-star 10-rounders, one six-round preliminary and a wrestling match for the opener.

Yarosz sped away to an early lead over Pirrone and held the upper hand throughout. He cut the Cleveland slugger's nose and mouth in the first and second rounds and took several hard belts to the heart and head in the third without flinching.

Pirrone was in a bad way in the seventh and eighth, but came back to shake Yarosz with a hard right and almost dropped Teddy in the tenth with a left that landed flush on the chin.

Dancing about and jabbing almost at will, Kid Chocolate, Cuban battler, lashed out a decision over Frankie Wallace, Cleveland lightweight pride, in a 10-round bout.

In another of the feature bouts Tony Canzoneri, former world featherweight and lightweight champion, who two weeks ago kayoed Chocolate, knocked out Cecil Payne, of Louisville, in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round bout.

In a six-round preliminary, the Alabama Kid, Negro fighter, from Dover, O., walloped Norman Conrad, Hartford, Conn., all over the ring for a decision.

HARRY STUHLDREHER, football coach at Villanova College, today declined to comment on reports that he was slated to succeed JACKSON CANNELL as grid mentor at Dartmouth.

Despite a mediocre season and the howling of the alumni, PENN'S football players today announced themselves in favor of the GATES PLAN for "de-emphasis" now in force at PENN.

PRINCETON sports leaders today definitely squelched a rumor that PRINCETON was to play a post-season game with MICHIGAN, announcing that "PRINCETON will not play MICHIGAN or anybody else this season."

LIONS SCORED IN EDITORIAL

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Columbia University's acceptance of Stanford's invitation for a New Year's Day game in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena was scored today by The Spectator, Columbia's undergraduate daily, as "a money-making proposition."

A leading editorial charged that the university administration, by accepting the invitation, "has repudiated its own standards" set up last February following an investigation of over-emphasis of football.

The committee held, in effect, that football should be a sport for the student body, and not solely a spectacle. The editorial continued:

"The men who accepted this invitation will not deny that the game is a tremendous money-making proposition, no matter how much will be distributed to charity. The university committee which accepted the invitation betrayed their trust." (Apparently the committee report is again referred to.)

Charging that the administration "completely forgot its ideals," the editorial adds:

"It means a tremendous ballyhoo deplored in recent years by President Butler and by men and women who have seen the vice which over-emphasis was developing. The university has repudiated its standards."

LOCAL HOCKEY LOOP FORMED

A four-team amateur hockey league to be known as the City League was organized at Duquesne Garden last night. The circuit, which is to stage its games on Monday and Saturday of each week and which proposes to lift the lid the first week in January, is made up of the J. Scott Morgans, the H. J. Weber Club, the East Liberty Terriers and the Pittsburgh Hockey Club.

The Morgans, formerly known as the Roy Schooley Juniors, loom as title favorites. The Schooleys were undefeated in two years of competition, and, while picking up a new name, they also picked up John McSorley, former Notre Dame star.

A definite decision as to whether or not a scholastic league also is to be formed will be reached late today. In the event the school loops is organized, it will play its games as preliminaries to the City League encounters.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—It will be Columbia, the gem of the Atlantic, vs. Stanford, the pride of the Pacific, in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

This classic of the Roses was assured today after Columbia had accepted the invitation to visit California and Lou Little, coach of the light blue and white, again called his squad into action. The Lions will leave here December 19 and return January 5.

And so, for the first time in history, California will see a truly representative New York team in action, and for the first time, too, the entire eastern seaboard will be united in rooting for the visiting team.

LIONS WELL LIKED

For the East, and particularly New York, and more particularly still, Broadway, holds a warm spot in its heart for Columbia. There are many reasons for this affection. Columbia, one of the oldest colleges in the country, was founded in 1754 and through all the succeeding generations it has kept its place in the front rank of educational institutions.

It had a reputation years before the American Revolution and from that day to this, when it has a total enrollment in excess of 37,000, it has continued to send out an unending stream of soldiers, statesmen, scholars and clergymen to take their places in the vanguard of the nation.

Around the turn of the century Columbia had some great football teams. Then the lid was clamped down and for 10 years, until 1915, Columbia was without a team, and for several years after the war their teams ranged only with such minor colleges as Amherst, Middlebury and Williams.

LITTLE BROUGHT CHANGE

But with the advent of Lou Little a few years ago there came a surprising change. The former all-America Penn tackle, who had worked wonders at Georgetown, came to the big town and at once proceeded to demonstrate that he could take almost any kind of material and develop it into a real team.

Soon his light-weighted teams began to bowl over major opponents. They reached their peak this season when they went through the season with only one defeat and that one chalked up against the over-confident Lions by the unbeaten and untied Princeton Tigers.

Six of the regulars, led by Capt. Cliff Montgomery, are veterans who will play their last college game New Year's Day. One of them, Red Matal, is without doubt an all-America end, who is so fierce in his reckless, devil-may-care onslaught that a powerful Syracuse team wound up with a net loss of 30 yards trying to circle his end.

THORNHILL CONFIDENT

PASADENA, Calif. Dec. 5.—(INS.)—After receiving the news of Columbia's acceptance of Stanford's invitation to play in the Rose Bowl game here on New Year's Day Tiny Thornhill, Stanford coach, today said:

"Columbia will have to be stronger than the Pittsburgh team we beat six years ago to beat us.

"I don't know a thing about the strength of the Lions, but I do know that I have a stronger team than the one that defeated Southern California, 13-7 last month.

"Those sophomores at Stanford are learning more every day, and I'm confident that they'll show up even better in the Rose Bowl than they did against U. S. C."

Thornhill admitted that the selection of Columbia was a surprise to him, and that he had not even had the Lions scouted. Army, Princeton, Nebraska and Duke were scouted, but Columbia's regular season ended before the Lions were brought into the Rose Bowl picture. Tiny continued:

'I'm not worried about that, for in looking over several of Columbia's opponents I find that some of my old buddies were coaching these teams."

Graduate Manager Al Masters, of Stanford, explained that Columbia was chosen on its record of the late season. He declared that Columbia's loss to Princeton in the early season was offset by the work of the Lions in more recent games.

CARDS START DRILLS

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Dec. 5.—(INS.)—With the cry of "Beat Columbia" echoing across the campus, the Stanford University football team started practice today for the 1934 New Year's Day Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena.

Assistant Coach Ernie Nevers, in charge of the squad during absence of Coach Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill in Pasadena, declared the Cardinals were confident of victory.

DODGERS SIGN PITCHERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—The Brooklyn Dodgers today announced they had added two young pitchers to their roster, Phillip Page, southpaw from Seattle, of the Pacific Coast League, and Bob Edwards, a right-hander, from Albany, of the International loop. Each is six feet two inches tall, but Edwards outweighs Page by 22 pounds, 197 to 175.

BUCCANEERS LEAD LEAGUE IN CLUB BATTING

CHUCK KLEIN KING BY WIDE MARGIN

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Charles (Chuck) Klein, with the Phillies' short fence as accompanist, rendered such a pleasing basehit symphony throughout the summer season the critics had no trouble in awarding him the plum that goes to the outstanding artist.

Chuck's crescendo concerts at the sardine box, known more politely as the Baker Bowl, enabled him to register so many hits that none of the rival artists were even close to the Hoosier Adonis, according to the National League official averages printed today. Klein batted .368 with his 223 safeties, his teammate, Virgil Davis, being the runnerup for the honors with a mark of .349.

No other batters in the league, save Chick Fullis, leadoff man for the Quakers, was able to get as many as 200 hits, so you will appreciate that Chuck made a runaway race of the batting parade.

PIET, VAUGHAN SPARKLE

Klein led in many elements of offense. Besides his topnotch hitting mark and record total of hits, he was in front in total bases, 365; two-base hits, 44, and homers, 28. In the last five years, or beginning at the outset of his career as a Philly regular, he has made 100 or more runs and 200 or more hits per season.

Pirate fans will be interested to know that Second Baseman Tony Piet was the third best hitter of the league among those who participated in more than 100 games. Tony smacked the rocket to the tune of .323 in 107 games. Both Klein and Piet have moved to new pastures since the campaign closed. Chuck is now a Cub and Tony a Red.

Four other Bucco luminaries, Arky Vaughan, Freddie Lindstrom, Paul Waner and Capt. Pie Traynor, are near the top of the list of those who played practically every day. Arky not only stayed with the best as he played every day, but led the league in three-baggers with 19.

BUCS BEST HITTERS

Tommy Thevenow, playing in 73 games, batted .312 for the Pirates. It was the best mark Tommy has compiled in his major league career. Pepper Martin, batting .316 as a star third sacker for the Cardinals, led the league in stolen bases with 26. Dick Bartell made the most sacrifice hits, 37.

Five players took part in all games played by their clubs, and three Buccos came in for this honor, Capt. Traynor, P. Waner and Gus Suhr.

BRONCOS, GAELS PART COMPANY

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Their athletic relations broken off for the second time in 37 years, St. Mary's College and the University of Santa Clara today faced the problem of filling gaps in their 1934 football schedules.

The annual gridiron contest between the two Catholic schools drew the largest crowd here this year, 57,000 fans, and led to the aftermath of verbal exchanges that ended with the break. The teams fought to a 6-6 tie.

At Santa Clara, where the Rev. James J. Lyons, university president, announced the severance of athletic relations yesterday, it was reported an Eastern opponent may be considered to fill the 1934 schedule. A game with Boston College at the Harvard Stadium has been suggested.

E. P. (Slip) Madigan, St. Mary's coach, announced he has already concluded arrangements for an "outstanding" foe to meet his team in San Francisco November 3, of next year. He declined to name the opponent. Madigan said the St. Mary's board of athletic control decided two weeks ago to break with Santa Clara but withheld final action until after a meeting of the trustees, December 10.

Santa Clara's coach, Maurice (Clipper) Smith, whose remarks after this year's contest as quoted in a newspaper brought the first threat of a break from St. Mary's, said he had selected four St. Mary's players on his 1933 all-opponents eleven. They are Canrinus, end; Gilbert, guard, and Wilson and Nichelini, halfbacks.

Assorted Stars On Wrestling Bill

An all-America football player, a rodeo star, a circus performer and a cowboy will be seen tomorrow night in the Olympia Athletic Club's professional wrestling show in Motor Square Garden.

Jim McMillen, star tackle and captain of the University of Illinois grid team in the day of Red Grange, will meet Karl Davis, former gridder of Ohio State, in one of the four preliminaries to the Gino Garibaldi-Sun Jennings bout. Orville Brown, who turned from bull-dogging steers to grappling, takes on Milo Steinborn, the German strong man, who toured in this country and abroad as a weight-lifter with a circus. Brown still keeps his hand in at his old business and at the recent rodeo in New York came off with second honors.

Paul Jones, hook-scissors artist, paired with Farmer Bill Nelson in tomorrow's card, developed the leg muscles that give him his powerful grip riding herd on longhorns in his native Texas.

Believe It Or Not (Reg. by U. S. Patent Office) By Ripley

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: WHOLESALE PATERNITY—Abbas Mirza, the son of Shah Fetteh-Ali, was born in 1785 and died in 1833, one year before he was to succeed to the throne of Persia. When he was 17 years old, he was appointed Governor of Azerbaijan, and continued to occupy this position until he died. His household included a harem of magnificent proportions, as would befit the heir to the throne. An English consul records that in 1810 16 wives of the Prince Royal bore him children in the same night, followed by six more births on the morrow. 510 MILES IN 6 DAYS—Fetteh-Ali (1762-1834) was in Shiraz when he heard of the death of his uncle, Aga Mohammed, in Teheran, 510 miles away. The Persian laws of succession are not clear-cut and the man on the spot has the advantage over all absent claimants. The 510 miles were covered on the same horse in six days, over the worst road one can imagine. As a result of this ride Fetteh became Shah of Persia, outdistancing all his rivals. THE LIVING STATUE—This punishment was known as gaching. The offender was bound with cord and a wall of bricks built around them. The space between the wall and himself was then filled with quicklime, the setting of which finally would strangle the victim. In the case I illustrated, this horrible punishment was inflicted for the theft of two cucumbers.

TOMORROW—THE GRAVE THAT GROWS.

PITT CHANGES CLINIC PLANS

Saturday morning before a crowd of high school and college coaches and players that may pass the 2,500 mark, the basketball squad of some district high school will be initiated into the mysteries of the Carlson offense of 1933-34 by Dr. H. C. Carlson, coach of the Pitt Panthers, at the University of Pittsburgh's fourth annual basketball clinic, an all-day affair at the Pitt Stadium Pavilion.

In former years it has been the custom of the Pitt clinic officials to use the morning session in showing the Pitt system of play as demonstrated by Pitt players. This year, however, there has been a change in the plans. Every high school that plans to attend the clinic, is invited to apply to have its basketball squad do the demonstrating.

From the list of applicants that will be in Jimmy Hagan's hands on Thursday, a drawing will be made, and the winning team will be announced on Friday so that the players will know to bring their uinforms.

The idea behind this innovation is to give the several thousand high school coaches and players a better opportunity to see just how the Pitt system is assimilated by actual high school players. Dr. Carlson feels that in this way, the spectators will get a better idea of its practibilities.

In the evening feature of the clinic, the Panthers will open the local collegiate season and the Intercollegiate Basketball Conference campaign against Georgetown. The Hoyas were the only league opponent to register a win over Pitt last winter, winning by a 28-27 score at Washington.

Minus only Don Smith, Dr. Carlson is again predicting a victorious season for his cagers. His present lineup has Don McCamant shifted from a guard berth to forward, pairing up with Skip Hughes. Claire Cribbs, varsity center for the major part of the 1932-33 season, is again leading the field at the pivot post and Charley Hughes and Russ Ochsenhirt are working at the guards.

WALKER SCORES K. O.

Mercer Countians Claim Tiger, Eli Stars

The Pittsburgh district is the capital of championship football in more ways than one. Consider the Princeton and Yale elevens in the season just closed. When the Tiger and Bulldog came together at New Haven Saturday their lineups were flavored with boys of this section. The young men are, Halfback Garry Le Van, Jr., of Princeton, and Guard Horace Weber Davis, Jr., of Yale.

Mercer County holds a connection for the two athletes mentioned, although Le Van learned his football in Steubenville. Baseball fans of Sharpsville and Sharon of more than 30 years ago are quick to recall Garry, Sr., as the crack shortstop of the Sharpsville club of the late 90's.

Garry Le Van

Burgess George Mahaney, of Sharpsville, one of the civic and sports leaders of Mercer County, spoke about the elder Le Van yesterday. He said:

"Garry Le Van was not only a leader in baseball around Mercer County, he really put together the first football team in the history of Sharpsville High School. He was a tiny chap and I understand his boy starring at Princeton is not much larger than his dad. Garry, Sr., was chemist for the Alice Furnace, of Sharpsville, for many years. Later he moved to Steubenville."

Davis, who has taken part in every Yale game of this wear, is the son of a former star of Sharon High School. Horace Davis, Sr., now a prominent corporation attorney, was the son of the owner of the historic Carver Hotel, which still operates in Sharon. The mother and dad of the Yale guard were both reared in Sharon.

The Mercer County metropolis naturally is keen for football, what with a record of having sent out almost a score of star performers. Included among them, were Harry Wilson, Mike Sebastian, Dick Booth, Mike Hardy and Tuss McLaughry, the latter the present coach of Brown University.

ROSENBLOOM VICTOR

Warner Disagrees With Selection Of Columbia

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(INS.)—Pop Warner, coach of Temple University, whose team did not play Columbia, cast the lone dissenting vote today among eastern coaches on the selection of Columbia for the Rose Bowl game. Warner said:

"I do not see where Columbia should be selected. I believe Stanford will be too much for them. Pitt has a much better record. Michigan would be a good representative. Next to Pitt I would book Nebraska and then Alabama. Fordham had the most power and ruggedness, but, of course, was beaten by two coast teams."

Rip Miller, Navy coach, said:

"Columbia gave us more trouble than either Army or Princeton, and I believe that at present it is the strongest team in the East with the possible exception of Fordham."

Said Fritz Crisler, Princeton coach:

"I want to congratulate Columbia and wish them success. I hope they meet with good weather, which is the main problem. Going from the cold of the East to the warmth of California is tough—and I hope Columbia has success despite the obstacles."

Central Pa. Schools Ban Spring Football

Windber will represent the West against John Harris High School, of Harrisburg, king pin of the eastern sector, in a game for the conference championship at Johnstown Saturday.

In banning spring football training the officials decided, however, to permit one week of practice prior to September 1.

DUKES' FOES SET

ST. LOUIS FRAY TO BE CLASH OF ALL-STARS

By JESS CARVER

The Dukes are going to play a team of all-stars in St. Louis in a charity football game next Sunday after all, but only the seniors of the varsity squad will participate, the ranks being supplemented by a flock of former Red and Blue stars.

Under these conditions, the contest hardly can be classed as a collegiate affair and in the event of a victory for the local arms, cannot be added to the local university's 1933 record.

Upon his return from New York and the Notre Dame-Army game yesterday, Coach Layden said he had accepted the offer of Father Maxwell, of St. Louis, director of the Boys' Club of the Mound City, calling for a game between the Dukes and a team of senior footballers from St. Louis, Washington and Missouri Universities. So as not to impair the eligibility of his under graduate gridders, Layden said he'd use only seniors. The fact that his under graduates will have to play with these same seniors in a college encounter in Florida against the University of Miami on New Year's Day may have to be straightened out later.

PLAYERS NAMED

Capt. Al Krankota, Steve Sinko, Henry Weinberg, Ben Ciccone, Armand Niccolai, Gerald Baker, William Powell, Frank DeCoster, Al DeLuca, Dick Nussbaum and Silvio Zaninelli are the seniors who'll make the trip to St. Louis, along with 19 former Duquesne stars, to be selected from a list including Buff Donnelli, Lou Skender, Kass Kovalcheck and Larry Sullivan, of the coaching staff; Paul Abele, Jim O'Donnell, Ted Todd, Ted Amman, Val Trambley, George Chacko, Mike Ferrera, Moon Clark, Al Venneri, Ben Barrett, Bud Devenney, John Donohoe, Staff Murphy, Joe Sepsi, Babe Kelleher and Doddo Burns.

The squad will leave here Friday night and stage a drill in St. Louis on Saturday.

LOCALS AT ROSE BOWL

The tri-state district is to be well represented as Columbia and Stanford clash in the annual Tournament of Roses game at Passadena on New Year's Day. Four players, two on each eleven, and two coaches have close district connections and will give the game a rare old Pittsburgh section touch.

In the first place, Capt. Cliff Montgomery, of the Lions, hails from Natrona Heights and Joe Ferrara, regular tackle and co-captain elect, is a Pittsburgher and did his prep school footballing at Peabody.

AIDES ANNOUNCED

Martin A. Flanagan, president of the Alumni Association of Duquesne, has announced his committee selections as aides for the annual football banquet to be held this year, December 14, in Webster Hall Hotel. The alumni will honor Duquesne's successful football team, which is to play in Miami New Year's Day for the Festival of the Palms classic.

Elmer F. Layden, assistant coaches and managers will be guests, together with the players. The old graduates plan awards to the squad members.

GRAPHIC GOLF

HAND AND WRIST DEVELOPMENT

Generally speaking, a house is no stronger than its foundation, and that may go for a lot of things, including golf.

Not the least in the foundation of a good golf swing is the matter of the hands. Of course, even good hands might be misused, but undoubtedly the greatest trouble lies in the fact that few golfers take the trouble to exercise them. Look back over the list of great golfers and you will have a hard time finding a player who didn't possess strong, capable hands.

Oftentimes these were developed by a constant association with golf since youthful days. In others they were the result of continued exercise Golfers who have taken up the game later in life, or any player whose hands seem to lack the development necessary for good results at this game, can do wonders by simple exercises such as gripping an object several times a day. A rubber ball, a round stick, any of a number of things will serve the purpose. Soon the muscles of the hand will respond naturally whenever the golf club is grasped. The fingers will be able to grip it lightly but firmly and there will be no fear of tightening up.

The grasp can be concentrated in the thumb and forefinger of the right hand and the last two fingers of the left, although the left maintains a firm grip always. Wrists and forearms may be strengthened by working the club up and down with wrist motion. This creates a better and easier action in which the wrists work together smoothly and after sufficient practice naturally.

DRESMICH MAY BE BIG STAR

By TOM BIRKS

For many years soccer managers in this district have been trying to find a goalkeeper to take the place of the famous Bobby Boyle. Fans who watched the three-game series between Morgan and Heidelberg that ended Sunday afternoon at Greenlee Field, are of the opinion that in young Dresmich, Manager Dave Matthews, of Morgan, has found an American boy who is going to fill the place vacated by the great Boyle when he decided to retire from active soccer football.

It was the brilliance of Dresmich that foiled Heidelberg dozens of times in the three games when veteran defenders, such as Dante Villani and Manager Matthews, had failed. This youngster seems to be able to do everything that the perfect goaltender should, and at the right time, too.

BOYLE GREATEST

Soccer fans never will forget Bobby Boyle and have eagerly awaited the day when another player would pull the daring, sensational saves that made Boyle famous.

Boyle, who is now a competent member of the local referees' association, came to the Pittsburgh district 20 years ago and was a member of the famous Braddock team that included Bill Jeffrey, now soccer coach at Penn State, Jack Lowther, Jimmy White, Sandy Blackwood and Whiteford. Boyle had played with the Glasgow Celtics, before emigrating to this country.

As a member of an all-star team selected by the Western Pennsylvania Football Association, Boyle went to St. Louis where the locals played a series with Mound City professional teams. St. Louisians had never seen a goalkeeper like Boyle. In those days the referees did not give a goalie the protection he should have. Boyle had to take it, and his final game against the Ben Millers found 15,000 fans cheering him to the echo.

TURNED DOWN OFFERS

At that time St. Louis teams were composed practically of home breds, managers and fans alike being opposed to signing foreign-born players, but when he reached the hotel Bobby found a number of teams offering contracts that no team in Pittsburgh could duplicate, $300 a month. This was a lot of money, but Boyle did not want to leave Pittsburgh and turned all offers down.

SCHOOLS HOLD BANQUETS TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN

Two schools, one of them crowned class B champion of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, will celebrate the close of their football campaigns with banquets tonight.

Mr. Pleasant High School, which defeated East Pittsburgh in a post-season game Saturday for the class B crown, will honor its team at a banquet in the high school dining room, while Crafton High School holds its annual celebration in the First Presbyterian Church, Crafton.

A flock of local football celebrities will be the guests of the Crafton High School squad. Howard Harpster, head coach at Carnegie Tech; Andy Gustafson, assistant coach at Pitt, and Joe Bach, Elmer Layden's chief aide at Duquesne University, and Joe Skladany and Howdy O'Dell, of Pitt, will be among the speakers.

The principal speaker at the Mt. Pleasant banquet will be A. A. (Buzz) Wesbecher, coach at Greensburg High School, whose team went through the season undefeated, but was tied by Mt. Pleasant. Greensburg won nine out of 10 games, but forfeited its right to the class AA title by declining a post-season game with New Castle.

School Notes

Swissvale High School, where the ever-popular Ed Paulie holds forth, will open its 1934 football season with Etna at Etna on September 21.

Mt. Pleasant High School has compiled a football record that compares with the best ever made by a district high school. Ned Culler's boys played 12 games, winning 10, losing one and tying one. Canonsburg, a class AA school, defeated Mt. Pleasant, 8-0, while Greensburg, which went through its season undefeated in class AA, was held to a 6-6 draw.

The Crafton High School season was recorded as a success as a result of its victory over Carnegie in the season's finale, 7-0. No matter how many games Crafton may lose, a victory over Carnegie makes up for all setbacks. Another notable victory scored by Fon Wenrich's boys was a 13-0 triumph over Wilkinsburg, a class AA school.

Only two schools were able to cross the goal line of Phil Bridenbaugh's New Castle eleven during the past season, Charleroi and Turtle Creek turning the trick in class AA games. New Castle came through with 11 straight victories, the second season in a row in which it was not defeated.

Burgettstown Union also enjoyed a fine football season. Roy Mann's eleven played nine games, winning seven, tying one and losing one. Only two schools scored on Burgettstown, Trinity holding Union to a 6-6 draw, while East Huntingdon triumphed by a 19-13 count.

Canonsburg struck its real stride after losing its first two games of the season, Scott and Burgettstown handed C. M. Musser's Gunners setbacks at the start, but Canonsburg turned right around and took eight straight victories. It was the only team to defeat Mt. Pleasant during the past season.

Peabody High School, crowned city champion as a result of its 13-0 victory over South Hills in a post-season game at Forbes Field, will receive the Fintex trophy, emblematic of the championship, at a school assembly to be held Thursday afternoon. The presentation will be made by Melvin A. Morgan, of the Fintex Corporation.

The Section I schools of the Pittsburgh Grade Schools will hold their championship swimming meet in the Forbes School pool this afternoon. Beechwood, Brookline, Conroy, Lee, John Morrow, McNaugher, Spring Lane, Troy Hill, West Liberty and Woods Run are among the entries.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

See the art exhibit, fellows! In less than a week now, it will be over for this year. So hurry and see it if you haven't already. The exhibit, you know, fellows, has paintings from all over the world, and a great many from this country. In school, you have probably been learning something about drawing. See the art exhibit, and see for yourselves what artists can do with their paints and brushes.

Here's a letter from a new captain today, fellows. She is Anna Marie Bailey, of 906 Spring way, Sharpsburg, and she sends pledges for 10 members today. Here is her dandy letter:

"Please send me an armband. I enjoy the Junior Patrol radio program very much. The name of my club is "The Ten Princesses." We call our alley Tin Pan alley for every week a bunch of boys throw dirt and cans around. We formed a committee and we always clean up. If we find out that anyone in our club is not keeping his promises, we don't consider them a member any more. I will be waiting for the cards and pledges and also for my armband."

We will send them right away, Anna, and also your armband. Helping to keep your neighborhood clean is a swell way to help others, but we are sorry the boys make your alley dirty that way. Couldn't you ask them to form a Junior Patrol, too? And we like your club name—"The Ten Princesses." That's a very pretty name, and we surely hope that every girl will be just as sweet and charming as a real princess always is.

And here's a letter from Bernice Crighton, of 1072 North avenue, Blawnox, Pa. She says:

"Please send me a membership card. We have a club in our room in school. Its name is "Lone Star." We have a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. I read the funnies and I like yours very much. I read about the children who write in."

Maybe you could make your "Lone Star" club a Junior Patrol club, too, Bernice. Why not ask the president, and have the children vote on it at the next meeting? All that is necessary to start a Junior Patrol is to have 10 members who have signed the Junior Patrol pledge to help others.

STOCK MARKET STAGES STRONG COMEBACK

Although the domestic gold rate was again unchanged, equities began to improve when wheat opened up and other cereals and cotton firmed. Wheat, corn and oats recovered 2 or more cents a bushel in the early hours. The dollar moved indifferently in foreign exchange dealings. Sterling and French francs were unchanged to slightly higher. Bonds were a trifle mixed, although improvement was recorded by various secondary liens. United States government securities were a little easy.

Industrial stocks showed the most vitality in the upturn, with gains of 1 to around 4 points predominating. Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak advanced about 4 each, while issues up 1 to 3 included American Telephone, United States Steel, American Can, Columbian Carbon, Goodyear, Western Union, Bethlehem Steel, Montgomery Ward, Canada Dry, Johns-Manville, Chrysler, American Commercial Alcohol, United States Industrial Alcohol, United States Smelting, American Smelting, Santa Fe common and preferred, Union Pacific, New York Central and Pennsylvania. American Can and Allied Chemical touched new highs for the year. Volume was about double that of yesterday.

Followers of the rail shares were encouraged when directors of the Santa Fe declared a dividend of $3.30 on the preferred stock. The last previous payment on this issue was $1.50 in June. The stock formerly was on a $5 annual basis.

Conferences in Washington regarding proposals for governmental regulation of stock exchanges were being watched closely by leading brokers here. Notwithstanding the fact that the governors of the New York Exchange have already imposed rather stringent trading rules, Wall street is of the oponion that some sort of statutory supervision of speculation is a probability.

While commission houses generally fear that profits will be further curtailed under federal regulation, there is some hope that public participation in trading may come back when it is realized the government is acting in the role of a "protector" by preventing bear raids and undesirable pool operations. Since the spring-summer advance, most brokerage concerns have been barely able to pay expenses because of dwindling trading volumes.

Although the administration's monetary policy continues to hold the principal attention of financial circles, investment commentators are beginning to call attention to signs of a pickup in business and industry. Reports of the chain stores for November, now beginning to appear, disclose a substantial advance in trade. The W. T. Grant Company showed a sale volume increase for the month of 8.9 per cent over the 1932 period. The volume of the S. S. Kresge Company was 6.3 higher and that of the F. W. Woolworth Company advanced 3.8 per cent.

GRAIN PRICES SHOW GAINS

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—Upturns in grain prices early today accompanied reports that President Roosevelt and Acting Secretary Morgenthau were determined on carrying forward the administration's present financial policy. The markets were distinguished by a notable absence of selling pressure. Opening ¼-¾ higher, wheat afterward scored an additional rise. Corn started at ⅛-¼ gain, and continued to climb.

ATCHISON PAYS DIVIDEND

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Directors of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad today declared a dividend of $3.30 on the preferred stock. The last payment was $1.50.

Six months ago a payment of $1.50 on the preferred stock was ordered and today's disbursement, payable February 1 to stock of record of December 29, brings the total for the year to $4.80. Prior to that time the stock was on a $5 annual basis, payments of $2.50 being declared every six months.

President Samuel T. Bledsoe said undivided net profits for the fiscal year ended June 30, available for the preferred stock, amounted to $5,962,294, equal to slightly over $4.80 a share.

Forbes

Should Order Prompt Return Of U. S. Wealth

By B. C. FORBES

RATS DESERT a sinking ship.

What should we call individuals who have been "deserting" America by hurriedly sending their wealth out of the country?

Mr. Forbes

Do you? I don't!

Long ago I wrote denouncing wealthy citizens who were doing their worst to scuttle America by hoarding gold, either in vaults at home or by sending it across the ocean.

The President should immediately turn his attention to those who have used other devices to transfer their riches from the United States to foreign lands.

He should issue a peremptory warning and admonition to them to bring back their wealth within a stated period.

The course here urged might tend temporarily to increase the value of the dollar, but the return of all the capital which has fled the country would have helpful effects in other directions.

The principles involved, however, transcends any such considerations.

So, let the President give selfish Smart Alecs fair warning. Then set in motion the machinery necessary to uncover all the facts, with a view to exposing and properly punishing offenders.

In normal times actions which may be perfectly legitimate can become unpatriotic, condemnable, destructive during abnormal times. Untrammeled international flow of capital is wholly desirable under ordinary conditions. But conditions have been and today are abnormal.

For wealthy men to tear down by hastily turning American investments into cash and draining the country of that cash is the polar antithesis of patriotism. America is our land, our home, our haven. In Heaven's name, let us stick to it!

WILL AMERICAN business and industry enjoy a rational measure of self-government after the NRA and other hubbub of the moment subside?

Ward Melville, president of the country's largest shoe retailing organization, who is president also of the National Council of Shoe Retailers (embracing 5,500 retail stores), as well as chairman of the committee on administration of the National Retail Trade Council in Washington, the body set up to supervise administration of the retail code, tells me he is genuinely optimistic.

He is convinced that if retailers are quick to seize the opportunity to govern themselves through the local retail trade councils now being formed in every city and town of over 2,500 population, the government's part in administering the retail code will gradually grow smaller and smaller.

He foresees the eventual establishment of a national retail trade institute which will advise against, and co-operate to end, unfair trade practices; secure better conditions for labor, better contractual arrangements for producers, and in general bring about a balanced economic structure.

In general, says Mr. Melville, each local council will be composed of two representatives of each branch of the retail trade signatory to the retail code, and after perfecting organization these councils will report to the national retail trade council in Washington for certification to the NRA administrator.

SINCLAIR DEAL NECESSARY

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(AP.)—Harry F. Sinclair, chairman of the Consolidated Oil Corporation, formerly the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, in a letter to stockholders, defended his action in selling more than a million shares of the old company's stock privately in 1928. The letter said:

"There was no other way in which so large an amount of money could have been obtained for the corporation at no expense. The impetus which the additional capital gave the corporation was the turning point in its life. It aided materially to make it a major company."

The sale of the stock at $30 a share netted the corporation $33,900,000. The Senate Banking Committee in Washington recently brought out in its investigation of stock market operations that a subsequent advance in the market price of the stock enabled the members of the purchasing group to reap a substantial profit on the transaction.

Mr. Sinclair's letter defended his participation in the transaction, in which he originally took a participation of 22½ per cent, with the explanation that in his opinion purchasers could not have been found to take the stock unless he had agreed to participate. Subsequently he allotted almost one half of his interest to others.

Remington Rand Earnings Increase

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Preliminary reports for October and November indicate that Remington Rand's earnings here and abroad in those two months were greater than for the whole of the company's second quarter ended September 30, 1933. Total sales in November were larger than for October although seasonally November total sales are 4 per cent under October.

In the September, 1933, quarter net profit was $203,656 after bond interest, depreciation, taxes and all charges, equal to $1.30 a share on the 156,950 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock.

The company's foreign sales in November were at a new high rate.

Electric Dealers Hold Meeting Here

Speakers at the meeting, sponsored by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the Iron City Electric Company and the Danforth Company, were P. Y. Danley, L. L. Shawber, H. P. Donley, F. M. Davidson, J. F. O'Donnell and J. E. Hugo, all of the Westinghouse company.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XLVIII.

"Good-looking men, unless they're rich, invariably marry money," declaimed Rhoda.

"And why are you telling me all this?" said Nollie.

"Hurry, Yvonne, I can't spend any more time on beautification." Then, to Nollie: "I like you, so I'm warning you that there's going to be nothing for you in this little—flirtation of yours."

Nollie flushed red. "I don't know why you're so interested in my welfare?"

Nollie got up.

"I've things to do. I appreciate your kind interest, but I assure you it's quite unnecessary."

She departed from Rhoda's suite, angry with herself.

Why had she been lured in there? To what end had she listened to Rhoda's harangue, except a profound irritation with her?

But the impertinent words lingered and stung.

* * *

JUSTIFIED EXPENSE

Champagne flowed like the River Hudson.

Jinny Judson was arrayed as Elizabeth, the Virgin Queen. Rhoda was Helen of Troy. Nollie a beautiful Du Barry.

Her employer had loaned her the wig and gown and outfit that had cost $600.

To spite Rhoda Vane and Madeleine Galbraith, now Mrs. Jack Brilling—for Jinny Judson disliked those two women.

She had brought a theatrical dresser all the way from Montreal, so that she and Nollie might be made up correctly and inexact costume.

Results justified expense. Both Nollie and herself looked wonderful.

"You must drink a glass of champagne, child! You must live up to your character!"

Nollie, excited, had quaffed the beverage.

That made Madeleine furious with Nollie—and him.

NO AUDIENCE

But Ted's eyes were roaming toward the little secretary girl who tonight was resplended as the king's favorite.

"And how?" asked Madeleine, who already 'had looked upon the wine when it was red.'

"Why don't you know your history, old dear? Don't you know Du Barry was a king's mistress?"

"And Jack's supposed to be a Norse king of some sort. D'you think she knew? I mean, d'you think she'd like to play the part?"

"What a fool the woman is!" thought Ted—but for reasons of his own he wanted further to inflame her against Nollie.

"I think she picked this role because tonight she wanted to be an all-'round fascinator," he said smoothly.

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch. She is rude to Nollie, but plainly tries to gain Tony's favor. Tony confesses that he loves Nollie. Jack Brilling and his bride are on a honeymoon near the Judson place. Rhoda makes it plain that she is jealous of Nollie.

Now Go On

"D'you happen to know I fired this very girl from Jack's office in New York?"

He grinned. "And yet she bobs up here? The long arm of coincidence!"

"I'll say it's nothing of the sort! I'll say she came up here on purpose!"

* * *

RHODA ECLIPSED

This was due to the influence of Ted White, Madeleine and Rhoda.

Their barbs had struck home. His jealousy was aroused about Nollie.

But his eyes lighted when he saw the girl. She made an exquisite Du Barry.

But just as he went up to speak to her Jack Brilling returned to Nollie.

"Keep off, you Irishman! Don't poach on my preserves!"

She contrived to lead Tony out into the garden.

She brought drinks there. Tony took a couple of highballs, although he was naturally abstemious.

Then he went back and danced with Rhoda, ignoring the Du Barry.

Let her flirt. Let her surround herself with men. The poisonous seeds of mistrust had been sown in his mind and now he was garnering them.

Nollie was hurt that Tony kept away from her, that he paid assiduous court to Rhoda Vane.

She stole away to her own room, and locked the door, and indulged in an outburst of disappointed tears.

COULD it be Tony?

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

If the complexion has a gray cast, do not use eye shadows. No matter what color is applied the complexion will not be improved. Be sparing with eye pigments under all circumstances. More can be carried at night than in the day time, but even so they must be applied with the utmost discrimination. A good substitute for them is a light film of rouge, which brightens the eyes, extends the synthetic flush up high where it rightly belongs.

White hair is no handicap. It is wonderfully becoming, flattering to the complexion from which youthful coloring and texture have departed. It must be beautifully arranged, kept scrupulously clean. The wise one with silvered locks will protect her halo from dust by swathing it in a chiffon bandage.

Protruding tummies are often caused by a lazy backbone. Stand tall, and the abdominal muscles will tighten. What women believe is fat is nothing but the result of poor posture. Without that inward curve of the spinal column, that dent in at the back of the waist, the chest cavity cannot be held normally, nor can shoulders be carried splendidly. Posture seldom troubles a woman's mind. Yet it is the foundation of anatomical grace and loveliness.

Probably the greatest help that the topcrest can have comes from a good digestion, a sound nervous system and long hours of sleep. Fresh air improves the vitality of the hair, so fluff up your hirsute mop every night, running your fingers through the strands, frictioning the scalp to a glow.

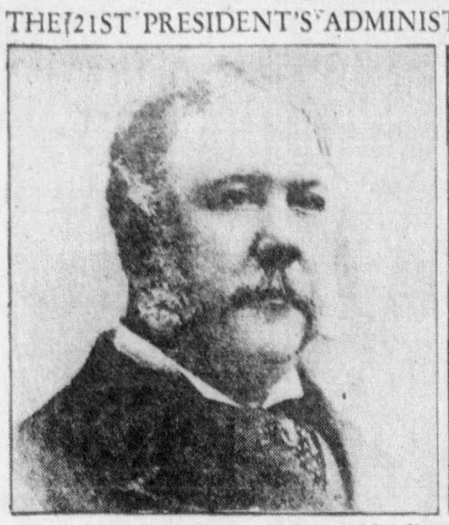
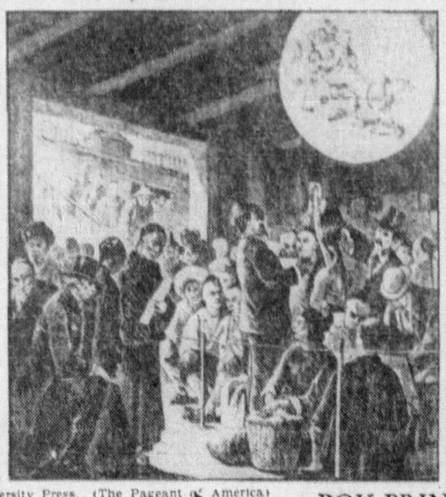
THE 21ST PRESIDENT'S ADMINISTRATION, CHESTER A. ARTHUR





Courtesy of Yale University Press. (The Pageant of America)

President Chester A. Arthur (1881-1885) disappointed the Republican party by his non-partisan attitude. The limitation of the Chinese immigration, aiming to protect American labor standards (1882), the Civil Service Reform Act to replace the spoils system by the merit system in filling governmental offices, the development of the Navy and other beneficial measures made his administration memorable. Above, right: Chinese immigrants flooding Pacific ports. (U. S. History)

BESSEMER PROCESS—MAKING STEEL FROM PIG-IRON

Steel is iron with 0.1% to 2% carbon content. It is much tougher than cast iron, is forgeable, temperable. The "pneumatic process," invented by W. Kelly, of Eddyville, Ky. (1852), and independently by the British Henry Bessemer (1855), gives steel from molten pig iron by blowing air through it in a pear-shaped vessel (converter) with tuyeres at the bottom. Mn, Si, P, S and excess C burn with spectacular flame, oxides are blown out or build slag with the flux.

The originally acidic silica lining (sand, clay) did not burn out S and P; the basic lining of dolomite and limestone (invention of Thomas) with an additional charge of limestone accomplished this (basic Bessemer process).

After blowing, aluminum, titanium and ferrosilicon are added to reduce ferrous oxide formed by blowing in air and to bring steel to desired composition. Finished steel is poured into metal moulds, giving the ingot (polygonal or round column) to be formed in the rolling mill into bars, plates and other shapes for commercial use. (Chemistry)

BOY-PRINCES IN THE TOWER

After a Painting by Millais.

Shakespeare's Richard III reads more like the story of an Oriental despot than that of an English monarch.

After murdering Clarence, his own brother, Richard imprisons the former's son and meanly matches Clarence's daughter. Having murdered Prince Edward, he woos Anne, the widow, then kills her. About to marry Elisabeth, his niece, Richard causes the murder of her brothers, the boy-princes in the tower. After other bloody deeds, the hunchback-monster meets death in battle with brave Richmond, afterward Henry VII.

CHARTIST'S DEMONSTRATION IN ENGLAND

After a Drawing by W. B. Wollard.

"Chartism" was a "radical social" movement in England (1838-1848) among people deprived of suffrage and was expressed in the "People's Charter." It demanded universal suffrage, equal electoral districts, vote by ballot, annual paid parliament and no qualifications but election for members. After great demonstrations and bloody riots, legislative reforms and expanding trade resulting in better earnings stilled this social tumult. (World History)

HOT WATER HEATING

One More Illusion Gone

Englishman has finally discovered famous elephant cemetery in mysterious Africa.

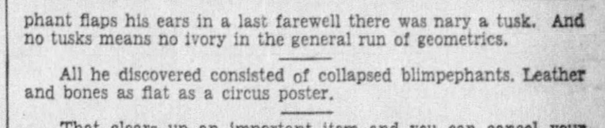
There has always been a legend about this. People have searched for it who couldn't find their way out of a greenhouse with all the windows busted.

Elephants live to a tremendous old age. They are rated high by the insurance actuaries. They are built to withstand an exorbitant amount of elbowing and jostling.

The elephant's appetite is simple and easily appeased by several tons of the adjacent landscape. When angry he will pull up trees. But his memory is so marvelous he never pulls up the same tree twice.

Until the time the intrepid London explorer discovered the elephantine mausoleum, nobody knew where the fading behometh spent his diminishing centennials. It was due more to lack of road maps than to respect for privacy. The man who could find it was scheduled to grab a fortune in ivory.

Yet, when the Briton finally reached the spot where the elephant flaps his ears in a last farewell there was nary a tusk. And no tusks means no ivory in the general run of geometrics.



All he discovered consisted of collapsed blimpephants. Leather and bones as flat as a circus poster.

That clears up an important item and you can cancel your ivory expeditions abroad and concentrate on them at home. If there are acres of diamonds in your own backyard there must be tons of domestic ivory at domestic executive conferences. We cannot give you exact decimals as many relatives are missing.

With this finding of the elephant park one more last frontier evaporates from the Atlas. Now, all romance has about vanished. We might as well haul in our imagination and coil it in a neat heap on the shrine of the inquisitive beezark who wants to know all about everything.

There is no ivory on the coasts of Africa. One man was there. And his word is as good as the man's who wasn't.

That's that and both of them are those. Personally, we wish that the resting place of the elephant had remained a secret. We shoot them for no reason except the photograph that proclaims you are a big game hunter equipped with letters of marque and reprisal entitling you to level a shoulder howitzer at a herbivorous animal that will stand on his hind legs for a peanut.

The Dry Minority

Citizens Who Still Favor Prohibition Stand As a Warning Against Abuse of Liquor.

As prohibition dies it is well not to forget that there are hundreds of thousands of people in Pennsylvania who still believe in it and who would revive it if they could.

The official returns show that 1,864,411 citizens voted for repeal, and 583,513 voted against it. Fourteen of the 67 counties—among them our neighbor, Butler County—gave dry majorities.

The people of Pennsylvania may be likened to the surface of the earth—three-fourths wet and one-fourth dry. Think of the prominence of the land area of the globe and you will admit that a one-fourth minority is not to be sneered at. If the d s should do just a little better than double their present number they would constitute a majority and be able again to impose some form of prohibition on the state.

Accordingly it behooves those who are to sell liquor, and those who are to buy it, to show that liberalism is not incompatible with temperance, that personal liberty does not mean abuse of privilege.

Let those who desire to restore the saloon, let brewers and distillers who may be tempted to finance "clubs" and restaurants with a view to promoting sales, reflect that Pennsylvania still has a very substantial nucleus of citizens who would like to outlaw the liquor business.

The sensible procedure for all is to demonstrate that under reasonable regulation the licensing system is a great improvement on prohibition.

Now for temperance! Now for law and order!

Sale of Teachers' Jobs

The Alleged Corruption of School Directors Is Another Argument for Modernizing the System.

Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, says evidence has reached him that school directors in several parts of the state have accepted, and perhaps have solicited, bribes from applicants for teaching positions. Teachers' jobs have virtually been sold, it is charged.

This brings to mind the corruption that prevailed in Pittsburgh in the old days when every ward had its own school board. The school directors in those days were in many cases ward politicians of the lowest type.

The schools suffered so under their management that we finally got rid of the ward school boards and created in their stead the present central board, composed of outstanding citizens appointed by the Common Pleas Court. Not a breath of scandal has touched the present board at any time since the change was made, and there has been vast improvement in the quality of public education.

And that suggests the remedy for the grafting that Dr. Rule hears has been going on in some of the school districts that are still under the direction of district boards. Get rid of them and put the schools under the direction of some central authority—say a county board.

There are 2,585 separate school districts in Pennsylvania—each with its own board of directors, tax collector, solicitor, auditor, and secretary. There may have been need of them years ago when, because of lack of facilities for travel and communication, each community had to be more or less self-contained. But in these days of automobiles and good roads, it would promote economy, efficiency, and, perhaps, honesty, to consolidate the districts into a comparatively few administrative units.

Modernization of the government might well start with the public school system.

That 'Free Port' Idea

It Will Not Be Taken Seriously Until There Is Some Chance of Its Becoming a Reality.

Mayor-elect W. N. McNair continues to talk about making Pittsburgh a free port, where foreign goods will be admitted free of import duty. He says he plans vigorous agitation in favor of the project.

Mr. McNair, returning to Pittsburgh from a vacation in Florida, stopped in Savannah to talk to a newspaper editor who proposes that that city shall also be made a free port. He has asked the editor to come to Pittsburgh to give an address on the subject.

The Mayor-elect evidently intends to be taken seriously on his free port idea. But it is hard to take it seriously in the absence of evidence that it has even a slight chance of success.

We will readily admit that if foreign goods could be landed in Pittsburgh free of import duty, there would be an immense increase in traffic on the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, that great new warehouses would be erected in Pittsburgh, and employment furnished to an army of stevedores.

On the other hand, some of our industries, unable to compete with the pauper labor of certain Asiatic and European countries, would have to go out of business.

However, the discussion at this stage is purely academic. Is there the slightest cause for supposing that President Roosevelt would be willing to make the revolutionary change in our tariff policy that Mr. McNair proposes? Or that Congress would agree to it? Or that Pittsburgh would be chosen in preference to the numerous other cities that undoubtedly would also ask to be made free ports?

Until assurance is forthcoming that the scheme has at least a ghost of a chance of realization the Mayor-elect will have difficulty in arousing enthusiasm for it.

A Tribute to English

A South American Points Out Advantages in Our Language.

A South American, educated in Europe, and familiar with French, Italian and Spanish thought and literature, entered the diplomatic service of his country and was eventually stationed in the United States. He has remained here over 15 years, and now speaks English with fine force and clarity. He has this comment to make:

"I always did, and still do, enjoy the charm of languages other than English. But until I learned the simple, frank, forceful strength of the English language, I was, in some respects, a different person. People who only speak English can hardly be expected to think in the embroidered manner of Europeans and vice versa. One of the most precious habits I have gained in life is the habit of thinking in terms of the English language."

The strength and force and simplicity of pure English is a heritage that we Americans are likely not to fully appreciate. Every time we lose the habit of thinking and speaking and writing in the best tradition of the English language we lose a little of the best that is in us.

The Asiatic "dope" menace increases. Reports from the Far East say that since international control was established over the Old World sources of supply opium and morphine factories are multiplying amazingly in China.

Already, it is said, that country is producing NINETY TONS of morphine a year, additional to the vast quantities that come out of Japan's provinces of Jehol and Manchuria.

Congress in January must restore the appropriations of the Federal Narcotics Bureau to combat the contraband traffic.

And to deal with local offenders every State that has not done so must enact the Uniform State Narcotics Law as soon as possible.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 5. — Ogden Nash seems the white-haired boy among juvenile jongleurs. A gangly, corn-fed youth in his late 20's, he was articled for a time to a publishing house as blurbist and to the New Yorker's editorial staff. Poetry was a side line. Now it's his sole vocation.

Outside of an occasional literary tea, he is rarely seen among Manhattan's brighter minds. The upshoot of his drop-kick verse has a sky-rockety swish that has incited a swarm of imitators. As obviously simple as his rhyming appears not one has acquired his crispyness.

Such light-footed lines encompass a cupidity and downright nuttiness. But in this fusion there is concealed a barb that somehow deflates all the new class of exploiters. Nash is death to the windy boys of the radio, short selling bankers and other clowns in the American comedy.

Of all poets he is the most confusing. He refuses to let people have confidence in anything and rakes the great off high horses with a single cockeyed line. Also—and quite important these days—he has made poetry pay. But to see him it's difficult to imagine he has written that!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Life Has No Blue Prints

He's waiting. For 30 years he has been waiting for someone or something to tell him what to do.

When he was a little boy, Mother and Father always told him what to do. They told him carefully, in great detail. They punished him if he did anything reckless or unexpected. They did this, not out of cruelty, but out of a real desire to protect him.

So the little boy grew and the years went on. Pleasant, placid, programmed years, with Mother, Father and Teacher, always at hand with a plan for him to follow.

Then presently he was 23, out of college, ready to tackle the world. But just what did "tackling the world" mean? He hadn't the slightest notion. But that didn't bother him. Someone, or something, had always turned up to point the way. Someone or something would turn up now.

Life, of course, wasn't like a Mother or Father or Teacher. But Life had a purpose and a plan, and a place for everybody. Life didn't tell you, in so many words, what to do. But it sent chances your way. All you had to do was to be eager and willing and ready to jump when the Right Chance came.

But how would you know it was the Right Chance? That was easy. When the Right Chance came, all your troubles would be over. You'd no longer have that wretched feeling of uncertainty. There'd be no petty annoyances—no horrid, heckling fears—no unpleasant consequences. When you found your right place in life everything would flow smoothly.

So he reasoned—because he had been taught to reason that way. And he began to wait.

"How silly they are!" he said to himself. "If they'd only keep cool and be patient, they might avoid all this. It isn't in the least necessary to get into such jams."

So he waited. And waited.

Jobs came along. But they were never exactly the right job. Naturally he had to take them. One must eat. But they never lasted long. Something always went wrong. His bosses were so impatient! Why didn't they tell him what to do, instead of blowing up because he hadn't done it? He was willing to co-operate. If someone would just sit down and make a plan with him—tell him exactly what to do and when to do it.

But nobody would. They were all too impatient. Everything was in such confusion. Nobody had a plan. It was all so senseless!

One after another, the jobs fizzled out. But he didn't really care. They were just stop-gaps, anyway. Presently something would turn up. He'd see Just What to Do. LIFE'S PLAN WOULD OPEN UP BEFORE HIM LIKE A BLUE PRINT . . .

* * *

Does the story sound familiar? Of course it does. You've seen it lived out scores of times. Perhaps for dazed, discouraged months or years you have lived that story yourself—waiting—waiting until Life should show you what to do.

BUT LIFE NEVER SHOWS US WHAT TO DO.

LIFE HAS NO BLUE PRINTS FOR US TO FOLLOW.

It is true that Life has a purpose. That purpose is GROWTH. But Life does not tell us how or when or where to grow. For if Life did, or could, what would be the result? We wouldn't grow. We would only make copy-cat gestures.

There is only one way to learn how to live—one way to learn how to grow—and that is by living, by growing. Meaning what? Meaning going ahead and doing the next thing. Taking chances with yourself. Making mistakes. Snapping out of it and going ahead again.

And get over the notion that if you wait long enough or seek far enough you'll find the Perfect Chance. You never will, for there's no such thing. No growing life is ever perfectly placid or permanently pleasant. Healthy lives are always disorderly, rebellious, fussy and fussed.

Only the dead can sit pretty. If you want to live, you must take the consequences.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Oh, You Santa Claus!

Who's afraid of the Big Bad Beard!

* * *

Somebody is always taking the joy out of life by announcing that BEARDS are coming back into vogue again. Beards! To wreck romance, spoil the art of kissing, and ruin the classic beauty of our nice, clean-shaven American men!

Only a year or so ago, the beard predicters pointed with joy to certain young Englishmen who had gone Santa Claus and gleefully prophesied that the hirsute-peril would find its way to America. But, like bolshevism, companionate marriage and prohibition enforcement, the threat turned out to be only an alarmist's nightmare.

* * *

Then came the gallant and picturesque Balbo. And men who hate the safety razor, took heart and saw in the tea-leaves a nation of Balbos over here.

* * *

Now, according to a feminine writer, the beard again is on its way over—this time from Paris! Paris—its native home and haunt, where men are dandies, and women don't seem to care WHAT they kiss!

* * *

Well—three times and out! OUT, FOREVER!

* * *

What in the wide world can an American man want with a beard? What would it profit him to grow one? What comfort or ease or beauty or dignity would it afford him, in this Land of YOUTH, where even doctors and college professors and bank managers are chosen for their youthfulness, and where, in both matters of love and matters of business, it is better to look as though you were just out of the bassinette?

* * *

Besides, our American men have the nicest and most pleasantly carved chins and profiles in the world—and they KNOW it! They also have the best teeth, the best dentists and the most charming smiles in the world. Likewise, they have fairly good table manners, and don't make a practice of spilling things on their neckties and shirt-bosoms. So, what have they to HIDE, behind the camouflage of a beard?

* * *

Once, I used to take these beard threats seriously and write excited and violent articles describing the unhygienic, unbeautiful, unkissable effects of a beard. But now I am serene. Since kissing became the great American social custom, I can safely leave it all to the men. THEY know when not to eat their onions—and why not to grow a beard! By the time that Parisian beard reached these shores, it would be so trimmed and filed down that it would be nothing but an eyebrow. Even when an American man DOES permit himself a mustache, he shaves it high enough above his upper lip to leave his mouth free—for smiling and kissing.

* * *

No, no, no! This is the Land of the SAFETY RAZOR! The razor, which made the world safe for romance, has come to STAY! And the only man in this country who really MUST have a beard is SANTA CLAUS!

Submarine Beauty in the Bahamas—Poppies As Prognosticators of War

By Edwin C. Hill

WHERE IN this world is beauty to be found in its most intoxicating perfection? Dr. Roy Waldo Miner, of the American Museum of Natural History in New York, steps forward to answer that question. One finds perfect beauty, says Dr. Miner, 25 feet under the surface of the sea, in the undersea coral gardens of the Bahamas Islands. He has just returned from his fifth visit to those wonder realms of brilliant fish and jeweled corals off Andros Reef and Rose Island. It is a wonderful sight that few persons have seen, as Dr. Miner tells us in "Natural History."

Andros Reef is massive, wild and grotesquely beautiful, with coral growths rising in menacing grandeur. The Rose Island reefs are filled with soft and colored beauty—rising terraces of rounded coral, cap by cap, dome by dome; their foundations columned and buttressed and pierced by caverns, arches and winding passages. Their ethereal beauty is heightened by multitudes of waving gorgonians; by sea-plumes, sea-feathers and sea-bushes of purple, violet, brown, tan, yellow and lavender, waving back and forth in the sunlight which descends in beams of light through heavenly blue waters. When breezes ruffle the water surface, the sunbeams flicker and dance, piercing the water in shining spear-shafts, advancing and retreating like the Northern Lights.

Dr. Miner's artist, Chris Olsen, painting in a diver's helmet 25 feet under the surface of the shining sea, using oil paints applied with a palette knife to oiled canvas stretched over glass, caught vivid impression of this submarine garden of the gods. Soon, in the great New York museum, as the result of 10 years' work and study, millions will be able to glimpse a perfect reproduction, in miniature, of this charming handiwork of the Creator of all lovely things.

Remarkable Rise Of Dr. A. C. Barnes

AMBROSE VOLLARD, born in the Island of Reunion, a French possession 'way down in the Indian Ocean, was running an art shop and having a time of it in Paris. Albert C. Barnes was working his way through the University of Pennsylvania by means of his skill as a baseball player. This was 35 years ago.

Today, in New York, one is privileged to see a portion of the priceless collection of French paintings which Vollard has permitted to be shown in America. And one of the prizes of the lot, Paul Cezanne's "The Bathers," is destined to stay on this side of the ocean. It will find a resting place in the remarkable collection which Barnes, now Dr. Albert C. Barnes, has housed away in a $6,000,000 endowed art palace in Merion, Pa.

An indifferent lawyer, Vollard turned to art and attached himself to the French impressionistic school. He bought the canvases of Manet, Degas, Cezanne, Monet and Renoir when only one other man in France would look at their work. They are gone, but he has lived to see their worth recognized, his appreciation of them vindicated and himself made rich and the possessor of a collection which is the envy of the world.

Albert Barnes, a good baseball player, turned to chemistry and went to Heidelberg, where he sang Negro songs in a beer garden to pay his way. Back in the United States he stumbled upon a compound which proved to have the uses of nitrate of silver without its searing qualities. He began its manufacture in an old shop in Merion. And what it turned out was argyrol.

Two hundred-pound, six-foot Dr. Barnes was not content with the millions that his discovery brought him. At heart he is a scholar, and, once interested in painting, developed into a critic of the first rank. Nowadays he has only to buy a picture and the artist is made.

Believe Poppies Predict New War

AMID ALL the murmurs and whispers and rumbles of the present war scare in Europe is a curious superstition of the peasants. They believe whenever the old battlefields of Flanders and France glow crimson with poppies, when those old blood-drenched fields bloom forth with an extraordinary profusion of poppies, that a new war is in the making, that the thirsty soil is calling for the fresh blood of young men. A terrible belief, but there it is.

And the news comes that not in many years have the fields of Flanders burned so redly as this year.

For many centuries the country people living in regions where the warring nations have fought it out, near the battlefields of Ramillies, Malplaquet, Fontenoy, Waterloo and the battlegrounds of the World War, have firmly believed that the blood red poppies were symbols of the blood shed by men who died in battle on those fields. Lord Macauley writes in his "History of England" that after the Battle of Landen, in 1693, the ground was strewn with the bodies of men and horses. And in the next summer the soil blossomed forth into millions of poppies.

It is not to be wondered at that American and Canadian soldiers of the World War saw some mysterious connection between their slain comrades and the poppies that waved everywhere on the fields of Flanders. That is why poppies are sold today in the streets of the cities, by ex-soldiers, to raise funds for disabled comrades.

It is an old, old belief, this notion that the red poppy is the flower of death, the symbol of death in battle. It goes clear back to the ancient Romans. But it was a Canadian soldier, John McRae, poet and physician, who gave the ancient belief a beautiful setting in verse. It was after the terrible Battle of Ypres that John McRae wrote the little poem which has become a classic. European statesmen should read that poem today, and very, very thoughtfully.

Public Schools Starved By Local Politicians

By James T. Williams, Jr.

EVERY American father and mother under the flag should "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the alarming facts developed by a recent survey of public education in the United States, which has just been completed by George F. Zook, President Roosevelt's Commissioner of Education, with the assistance of his efficient staff in the Federal Office of Education.

This survey shows that the very existence of public schools in hundreds of communities all over the country is hanging in the balance.

"We find ourselves," declares the Commissioner, "in the grip of a social difficulty from which we shall extricate ourselves only with great effort and pain."

Information reaching the Federal Office of Education directly from school officials all over the United States reveals the following alarming facts:

When the school term opened this autumn, 100,000 additional children were denied the opportunity which only public education can give them.

In normal years, 1,659,000 children between 6 and 13 years of age are out of school.

In normal years, 521,700 children between 14 and 15 years of age are reduced to the same plight.

Prospects for Next Year Are Worse

THIS means a total of 2,180,000 American children of school age, according to most compulsory education laws should be in school, are out of school either because they are made to work or because there is no school for them to attend.

But the situation is much worse now because this is not a normal year. Nearly 2,000 rural schools in 24 states failed to open last September. Many private and parochial schools are closing down for lack of funds. Sixteen institutions of higher education have been discontinued since last year. One thousand five hundred commercial schools and colleges have already closed and others may have to close within the next few months.

In some communities, free public schools are no longer available even for the poorest family. The school authorities are admitting as pupils only those children whose parents can pay the rate required.

Because of lack of available funds, one of every four American cities has already shortened its school term and 715 rural schools will close between now and Christmas.

School terms in nearly every great American city are today one or two months shorter than they were 70 or 100 years ago.

And the prospects for the coming school year, as reported to the Federal Office of Education, are even darker. For example, 90 per cent of the schools of Michigan will shorten hours.

Terms Shortened In Some States

IN Missouri, 100 high schools and 1,500 rural schools will be compelled to close well in advance of the regular school term. Fifteen per cent of the schools of Nebraska will be compelled to cut at least one month from the school term. Most of the schools in New Mexico have been put on notice that their terms will have to be shortened.

"Most people have a vague idea," says Commissioner Zook, "that teachers' salaries are low. Few know how low they are. For example: an unskilled factory worker laboring for a year at the minimum blanket code rate would receive $728, which is little enough. One of every four American teachers is now teaching at a rate less than $750 per year.

Arizona teachers have suffered salary reductions ranging from 20 to 40 per cent and have lost 10 per cent in discounting warrants and face further reductions.

Kansas teachers have lost 30 per cent by salary reductions, and those in Michigan may be reduced as much as 60 per cent.

Meantime 200,000 certificated teachers are unemployed at a time when "there never was such a demand for educational opportunity as there is today." More children are seeking an education today than ever before, but local politicians, by starving the public school system, are making it more difficult than ever to satisfy the hunger and the thirst of American youth for the sporting chance in the battle of life that only a good schooling can provide.
